Twin Falls Chamber official resigns after 5 years in post

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce announced Tuesday evening that, after several days of negotiations with Chamber Executive Vice President Mike Dolton and his attorney, Dolton has submitted his resignation.

"Mike has done the Chamber a good job. The Chamber of Commerce is presently in sound condition and able to serve its members," Chamber President James May said Tuesday, reading from a press release.

Dolton will be on a paid leave of absence until the end of this month, May said. The Chamber has no immediate plans to replace Dolton and will rely on the staff at the Chamber office.

"People know what I've done here and it (the resignation) was voluntarily rendered on my part," Dolton told The Times-News Tuesday night.

The Chamber is 23.7 percent ahead of budget so far, he said, noting that he hired and trained the people that the Chamber Board of Directors will rely on.

"I took a near-bankrupt Chamber of Commerce and turned it into the second strongest Chamber in the state in five years," Dolton said.

He said he can point with pride to the state's plans to improve U.S. Highway 93 between Twin Falls and Jackpot at the Chamber's urging, the Chamber's plans for a new building, the recent Fantus Company economic development study of Twin Falls, and the Chamber's public stance in favor of the right-to-work law.

Daniloff's detention increasing tensions

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

Federal grand jury indicts Soviet — A3

WASHINGTON — The Soviets' detention of American journalist Nicholas Daniloff "is a matter of increasing concern" to President Reagan as diplomatic efforts to win his release continue with no apparent success, the White House said Tuesday.

A day after Reagan publicly pronounced Daniloff innocent of the espionage charges lodged against him and warned Moscow that holding him prisoner threatens U.S.-Soviet relations, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes refused to discuss what further steps the administration is considering, except to say "there are some."

Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz briefed congressional leaders on the case but pledged these lawmakers not to divulge what retaliatory moves the administration is considering.

British Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe, talking to reporters at Dulles International Airport in suburban Virginia as he prepared for a flight home, said the Daniloff case "... casts a very great shadow over Soviet good faith, a matter which must be of great concern to us. It's a kind of moral Chernobyl (nuclear reactor accident site), which risks poisoning the whole field of East-West relations. It is very important that the Soviet Union should take action to prevent that happening."

Administration sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, have said the United States may begin expelling Soviets attached to the United Nations a few at a time until Daniloff is freed.

The administration has suggested that Daniloff, the Moscow correspondent for U.S. News & World Report, was framed by Soviet secret police in a scheme to exchange him for Zakharov, who was arrested in a New York subway station on Aug. 23. Daniloff was arrested in Moscow one week later.

In an independent action, The Associated Press board of directors, made up of newspaper publishers and executives of the world's largest news-gathering organization, canceled a scheduled visit to the Soviet Union later this month, calling Daniloff's arrest unjustified and demanding his immediate release.

While refusing comment on what steps the administration may take if Daniloff is not released, Speakes said several meetings with Soviet officials in preparation for an eventual U.S.-Soviet summit remain on the schedule, including talks here Sept. 19 and 20 between Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

"For the moment, there has been no change in the schedule," Speakes said, adding that diplomatic efforts to win Daniloff's release are continuing.

"We would hope before the Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting that the Daniloff matter is resolved; but if it's not, it would obviously be a topic of major discussions" at that

Senators demand release

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted 93 to 0 Tuesday to demand the release of Nicholas Daniloff, with one senator charging that the KGB's arrest and imprisonment of the American news correspondent were reminiscent of "the days of Josef Stalin."

The Senate resolution states that Daniloff's continued imprisonment on espionage charges "threatens to undermine constructive relations between the United States and the Soviet Union and jeopardizes the hopes for a summit meeting between President Reagan and General Secretary (Mikhail) Gorbachev."

And it urges all news gathering and news accreditation organizations that provide support, membership and other privileges to Soviet news organizations to "consider appropriate actions to underscore the demand for Daniloff's release."

The resolution did not spell out what actions might be considered appropriate.

Daniloff, 52, a correspondent for U.S. News & World Report, once covered the Senate as a correspondent for United Press International.

In a brief series of speeches preceding the vote, senators condemned Daniloff's arrest and proclaimed his innocence.

Newsman resigned to jail

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Jailed American reporter Nicholas Daniloff fears U.S.-Soviet tensions over his case are "escalating dangerously" and believes he won't be released soon, his wife said Tuesday.

Ruth Daniloff, accompanied by U.S. Consul Roger Daley, met with her husband for the third time in Moscow's Lefortovo prison.

She has accused the Soviet government of framing the 51-year-old journalist and holding him hostage so an exchange can be arranged for Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet U.N. employee arrested Aug. 23 in New York and indicted Tuesday on spy charges.

After seeing her husband for an hour and 20 minutes, Mrs. Daniloff told reporters he looked drawn but was composed and gave her a thorough rundown on his conditions and KGB interrogations that have covered 28 hours.

"He is philosophical. He thinks it will be a father long haul," she said.

"He thinks his case is escalating rather dangerously and that he wouldn't like to see it torpedo the summit or torpedo U.S.-Soviet relations," his wife said, referring to possibility of diplomatic reprisal by the United States if Daniloff is not released.

Moslems abduct director of school

By RODEINA KENAAN
The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — An American who runs a private school in Beirut was kidnapped by four gunmen Tuesday on his way to play golf, and a caller claimed responsibility in the name of the Shiite Moslem group Islamic Jihad.

The kidnapping was the first abduction of an American in Lebanon in 15 months.

The U.S. Embassy identified the victim as Frank Herbert Reed, 53, of Malden, Mass., director of the Lebanese International School in Moslem west Beirut.

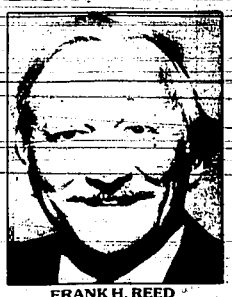

Islamic Jihad, which espouses the fundamentalist teachings of Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has said it holds at least three other American hostages.

A spate of politically motivated kidnappings in west Beirut in 1985 prompted most Americans and other Westerners to leave the city. The caller on Tuesday accused Reed of being a CIA spy.

Police said the assailants, toting silencer-equipped pistols and driving in a dark blue Volvo, rammed Reed's chauffeur-driven car onto the sidewalk at 11:15 a.m. near the ruins of a supermarket in west Beirut's Bir Hassan district.

Reed was driving from his home in west Beirut's Manara neighborhood to play golf at the war-scarred course on the city's southern edge. Two men climbed from the Volvo, forced Reed and his Lebanese driver at gunpoint to get into the kidnappers' car and sped off, police said.

The driver was freed minutes later a few hundred yards from the headquarters of Syrian intelligence officers in charge of enforcing a security plan to restore law and order in west Beirut.

LaRouche insists he can't pay judgment

Extremist never asks who pays bill

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, insisting he can't pay a $200,000 court judgment, has told a federal judge he's like a poor uncle "traveling from place to place and relative to relative, who never asks who's paying the bill."

LaRouche's attorneys are to appear in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday to appeal a magistrate's order that LaRouche answer questions about who pays his personal expenses from the heavily guarded million-dollar Virginia estate where he lives, to daily bills for food and laundry.

U.S. Magistrate W. Curtis Sewell last month fined LaRouche $5,000 and ordered him to pay $200 a day until he provides the court with answers to those questions.

The court inquiry into LaRouche's ability to pay could shed light on the multimillion-dollar empire and network of corporations and organizations

The court's inquiry arose after the NBC television network won a $200,000 judgment against LaRouche last year for interfering in the network's business.

LaRouche maintained during the trial that he pays his own personal expenses, responding to the ruling of more than 10 days of his own personal expenses.

[illegible] discovery motions, LaRouche said he doesn't know who makes his expenditures. He also contended that people associated with [illegible] have refused to say if they paid the bills.

His response was filed in court [illegible] during the three periods [illegible] have been [illegible] associates in many [illegible] physical security [illegible] LaRouche said. [illegible] many persons, including some foreign governments and political parties, be glad to pave [illegible] my personal [illegible] counting of this hospitality, for have I asked them to account for their own sources of income.

"In certain ways like an impecunious uncle travelling from place to place and relative to relative, who never asks who is paying the bill," he said.

"I have no record nor personal knowledge of direct or implicit expenses which may have been incurred in extending this hospitality," he said.

LaRouche, who is constantly under heavy guard against what he claims is the threat of assassination, said he doesn't know who pays for "securing the physical safety of myself and others," except the portion paid by his campaign committee in the 1984 presidential election.

LaRouche is a frequent fringe candidate for president and head of an extremist political movement with candidates across the country, and who is tied to organizations and corporations that raise millions of dollars through contributions, loans and sales of publications.

Drug test order likely

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Cabinet group is ready to recommend that President Reagan order mandatory drug testing for some federal employees, a White House spokesman said Tuesday, as the Senate Democratic leader taunted the administration for seeking too little money to combat drug abuse.

Spokesman Larry Speakes said the Domestic Policy Council, headed by Attorney General Edwin Meese III, would meet today to complete work on a set of recommendations for Reagan, who has stepped up the administration's crusade against illegal drug use.

Among the recommendations, Speakes revealed, will be one calling for mandatory drug testing for federal employees in sensitive jobs.

He said the president would issue an executive order on drug testing in the federal workplace next week. He said the order would entail testing and "in sensitive areas, it would be mandatory."

He said that Reagan will receive the recommendations Thursday and announce some of his decisions in the televised speech that he and first lady Nancy Reagan plan to make jointly on Sunday night.

Briefly

Primary voters kind to women

The Associated Press

Democratic Rep. Barbara A. Mikulski and Republican Linda Chavez swept past their male rivals Tuesday night to claim competing Senate nominations in Maryland.

Liberal activist Mark Green won the Democratic spot on the ballot in New York against Sen. Alfonse D'Amato.

On the busiest primary night of the season — and one in which voters treated women candidates kindly — Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, the daughter of the late Robert F. Kennedy, won a Democratic nomination to the House from Maryland.

Connecticut lawmaker Julie Belaga won the Republican nomination to face Gov. William O'Neill in November. And former Rep. Bella Abzug held a narrow lead in a multi-candidate Democratic primary in a suburban New York district. Mrs. Abzug, who represented Manhattan for six years in the House, led Oren Teicher 5 percent to 34 percent with 95 percent of the votes tallied.

In other results from voting in nine states and the District of Columbia, former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody, running for the Senate in next-door New Hampshire, won the Democratic nomination to oppose GOP Sen. Warren Rudman.

Minnesota's Democratic Gov. Rudy Perpich took a slim lead as the first votes were counted in his race with St. Paul Mayor George Latimer and three other opponents. Former state Rep. Cal Ludeman won the GOP nomination.

Former Vermont Gov. Richard Snelling earned the GOP spot on the fall ballot against Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy, who was unopposed for nomination to a third term. Snelling, coaxed out of retirement by national GOP officials, was garnering over 70 percent of the vote.

In a race to succeed outgoing Gov. Harry Hughes in Maryland, Baltimore Mayor William Donald Schaefer defeated Attorney General Stephen Sachs in a four-way race for the Democratic spot on the ballot. State lawmaker Thomas J. Mooney was unopposed in the Republican primary.

Maryland aside, the only other open Senate seat on the ballot was in Arizona, where Barry Goldwater is ending a 37-year career in politics. Rep. John S. McCain III was without opposition for the GOP nomination. Former Corporation Commission Chairman Richard Kimball was unopposed for the Democratic nomination. McCain, who served time as a prisoner of war during Vietnam, enters the fall campaign rated the favorite.

In Arizona, where Democratic Gov. Bruce Babbitt is retiring, Republicans Burton S. Barr, 68-year-old state lawmaker, battled auto dealer Evan Mecham. On the Democratic side, Carolyn Warner, 56, the state superintendent of public instruction, took on Phoenix attorney Tony Mason and Phoenix businessman David Moss.

Donovan case jury pick begins

NEW YORK (AP) — Jury selection began Tuesday in the long-delayed business fraud trial of former U.S. Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, after prosecutors failed in an effort to conceal some potential witnesses' names.

Nearly two years after Donovan, nine other men and two companies were indicted, state Supreme Court Justice John P. Collins began questioning potential jurors from a pool of 99 people.

Mayors support drug war bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan House bill that would pour billions of dollars into the war on drugs won support from the nation's mayors Tuesday, while the Reagan administration pledged to support new drug legislation in some form.

The House begins at least two days of debate Wednesday on the bill, the most expensive and comprehensive congressional attack on illegal drugs in recent years.

Aircraft below rim of canyon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Photographs taken by a tourist show the sightseeing plane and helicopter that collided over the Grand Canyon last summer were at least several hundred feet below the canyon rim at the time of the collision, documents revealed Tuesday.

First suits filed after crash

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first lawsuits stemming from the Aeromexico crash that killed at least 78 people were filed Tuesday as the last of a federal team probing the disaster prepared to return to Washington, D.C.

A lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court by attorney Melvin Belli's firm seeks unspecified damages on behalf of relatives of four passengers on the jetliner.

Danielle downgraded to storm

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Danielle weakened to a depression Tuesday as it sputtered toward the central Caribbean Sea, skirting the cooler waters off South America's north coast, forecasters said.

"The projected track is across the middle of the Caribbean. If the storm holds together, we'll have landfall somewhere, but for the next day or two we don't anticipate landfall," said Hal Gerrish of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

C-130 crash kills 3, hurts 2

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — A Tennessee National Guard transport plane crashed and burned while attempting to land Tuesday, killing three people and injuring two, authorities said.

The C-130 plane, with a crew of five from the 118th Tactical Airlift Command in Nashville crashed at Campbell Army Air Field about 2:10 p.m., said Capt. Dan Schmidt, a Fort Campbell spokesman.

LaRouche

He lives in a 14-room estate on 171 acres in Loudoun Co., Va., which is owned by Oklahoma oilman David Nick Anderson.

In an interview in May, Anderson said LaRouche's organization pays rent sufficient to cover his mortgage payments, which according to public records were $9,605 a month during 1985.

NBC won the $200,000 award in a counter-claim after LaRouche filed a $150 million libel suit against the network. A federal jury rejected LaRouche's suit and found in favor of NBC's claim that LaRouche followers had interfered with its business by canceling interviews the network's reporters had scheduled.

LaRouche has contended he cannot pay the judgment because he has no money and no income.

Peter Stackhouse, attorney for NBC, said the network hopes to establish that the groups linked to LaRouche are his "alter ego," provide for him financially, and should be forced to pay the judgment.

Sewell, in his order, said: "I think that the judgment debtor here has the sole information which could resolve all of these disputes simply by payment of a legal, legitimate order of this court. For whatever reasons, Mr. LaRouche has decided not to voluntarily comply."

LaRouche's attorneys said they wrote letters to each of the 20 LaRouche-linked groups named by NBC, asking if they knew who paid his expenses. Lawyers for five of the groups responded that they refused to answer, 10 of the groups didn't respond, and letters to five others were returned by the Postal Service marked "moved, not forwardable."

"Since Mr. LaRouche is not an officer of any of these entities, nor does he control any of the entities, he can do no more than request that they provide him with the desired information," the LaRouche lawyers said in a memorandum.

LaRouche-linked groups also face other judgments and lawsuits, but the NBC proceeding is the only one where LaRouche is named personally and singly.

"The only remaining question is how long can LaRouche continue to get away with his flaunting of the judicial system," Stackhouse said in a brief last week.

He noted that one of the entities that refused to answer, Campaigner Publications Inc., is run by two LaRouche aides, one of whom, Edward Spannaus, "acts as the LaRouche chief of staff."

"The shame of it is that these tactics will work until LaRouche is forced to comply with the orders of the judicial system," Stackhouse said.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 4th Circuit has upheld the judgment against LaRouche, and he has appealed to the Supreme Court.

session, the spokesman said.

He added, however, that it would not be the only subject discussed at the talks, which were set up to arrange a summit meeting, possibly later this year.

While saying the United States still hopes a summit can take place later this year, Speakes warned anew that the Daniloff case remains a serious obstacle to an improvement of superpower relations.

"As each day goes by, it is a matter of increasing concern to the president," the spokesman said.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., speaking to reporters after the congressional leaders' meeting with Reagan, said that both the president and Shultz made it clear that the United States will not trade Daniloff for Zakharov.

Speakes said the government had not yet decided whether to permit several senior officials to participate in a privately organized conference next week in the Soviet Union.

Officials of the Chautauqua Institution, a cultural center near Buffalo, N.Y., argued that Daniloff's arrest makes a planned trip by scholars, journalists and government officials to discuss U.S.-Soviet relations more important than ever.

Strobe Talbott, Washington bureau chief of Time Magazine and principal editor of the memoirs of the late Soviet leader Nikita Krushchev, said he will cancel his participation in the U.S.-Soviet conference in Riga, the capital of Latvia, unless Daniloff is freed.

Dolton

Dolton could not say where he will work next, but said that he has several options.

When asked if the Chamber Board had been dissatisfied with Dolton's work, May would not comment. He later said that Dolton "Had done his work enthusiastically in the beginning," and that the board and Dolton had agreed it was time for him to move on.

"The very position itself is one that people serve a time and then move on to another area. We just feel at this time that it would be better served if he moved on to other fields," said May.

The board's vote to accept the outcome of the negotiations and Dolton's resignation was unanimous, May said. The language of the press release was also negotiated, he said.

Dolton began working for the Chamber of Commerce June 1, 1981.

He turned to business development after working in law enforcement and trying his hand at politics.

After serving in the military police in the late 1960s, Dolton was an Oregon state patrolman until a November 1979 altercation left him with a ruptured disc and a paralyzed right arm. After fully recovering, he moved to Payette, where he went to work for the Chamber of Commerce, the city of Payette, and the Payette Industrial Development Corp. He worked those jobs for two years before the Twin Falls Chamber hired him.

While in Payette, Dolton ran unsuccessfully for Payette County sheriff.

Dolton opened his career in Twin Falls with a press conference May 18, 1981. At the press conference, he told reporters he was "aggressive, but I try not to be pushy." At the time, he said he had plans, but had to wait to get the approval of his 14-member board of directors.

Grand jury indicts Soviet on charges of espionage

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted Soviet U.N. employee Gennadiy F. Zakharov on espionage charges Tuesday as U.S. officials insisted he would not be traded for an American journalist accused of spying in Moscow.

The three-count indictment charged Zakharov, 39, with trying to buy classified military secrets for the Soviet Union.

In a statement issued after the indictment was returned, Attorney General Edwin Meese said anyone discovered violating U.S. espionage laws would be prosecuted vigorously.

"Protecting the national security of the United States is among the most fundamental responsibilities of the federal government. No crime is more serious than compromising that security," Meese said.

There has been speculation that Zakharov's arrest led the Soviets to arrest Nicholas S. Daniloff, Moscow reporter for U.S. News and World Report, on spy charges. Daniloff's wife, Ruth, has accused the Soviets of framing Daniloff and holding him hostage so an exchange can be arranged.

Asked if the juxtaposition of the cases led to special negotiations between the Justice and State departments, Thor O.E. Kotlarchuk, trial attorney for the Justice Department's internal security section, said, "We followed normal procedure for an espionage case."

GENNADIY F. ZAKHAROV
Still held without bail

The indictment, returned by a grand jury in Brooklyn after an hour-long meeting, charged Zakharov with conspiracy to commit espionage, obtaining classified defense documents and attempting to communicate the material to Soviet agents "to be used to the injury of the United States and to the advantage of a foreign nation."

If convicted, Zakharov would face a maximum penalty of life in prison, the Justice Department said.

The grand jury's findings were handed up to a federal magistrate in a routine proceeding that was so brief courtroom sketch artists had trouble drawing the participants.

Neither Zakharov nor his attorney was present.

Zakharov remained held without bail, as he had been since his arrest in a subway station Aug. 23. If he had not been indicted Tuesday, the government would have been forced to produce new evidence at a hearing Tuesday to continue holding him, said Thomas Roche, a U.S. attorney's spokesman.

Federal marshals, unaware of the indictment, brought Zakharov to the Brooklyn courthouse from the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan for the hearing. Zakharov was returned to the federal jail later in the day.

Roche said Zakharov's attorney, John Mage, had been notified about the indictment. Mage was not in his office when called several times for comment.

The case was assigned to U.S. District Judge Joseph McLaughlin. Arraignment was scheduled Sept. 19.

First lady's maid pleads not guilty

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan's personal maid and two other people pleaded innocent Tuesday to charges they conspired to smuggle ammunition to Paraguay.

"There is a possibility of more prosecution," said Gregory Welsh, an assistant U.S. attorney. He declined to elaborate.

Anita Sanabria Castelo, 45, of Takoma Park, Md., who has been on administrative leave since Aug. 7 from the White House staff, Julio Cesar Baez Acosta of Paraguay and Eugenio Silva of Richmond appeared before U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr.

All three are free on bond awaiting a Nov. 3 trial.

A fourth man also indicted Aug. 28, Hernan Perdomo Duarte, has not been apprehended. Welsh said it is fairly certain the man is no longer in this country.

All four are natives of Paraguay. Silva is an auto mechanic in Richmond. Acosta is the captain of the Paraguayan freighter, Marsical Jose Felix Estigarribia, allegedly used to smuggle the ammunition. Duarte was the ship's chief officer.

"I can't comment on any facts that are not already on the public record. The indictments make no mention as to why they did it," said Welsh.

The four allegedly conspired to buy hundreds of thousands of .22-caliber long rifle rounds and ship them to Paraguay from November 1985 to Aug. 5.

Miss Oklahoma's comedy routine unusual for Miss America Pageant

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Is America ready for Rodney Dangerfield in an evening gown?

Miss Oklahoma Mignon Merchant's stand-up comedy routine is one of the more unusual talent performances in this week's Miss America Pageant.

Miss Kansas Heather Lynn Clark, 23, of Benton will do sign language as she sings "I'll Never Say Goodbye." Miss West Virginia Shannon Renee Barill has combined her training in ballet and jazz for what she calls "jazz en pointe."

Miss Illinois Lisa Ann Heussner will portray poet Emily Dickinson in a dramatic monologue and Miss Nevada Kelsey Kaelyn Kara will dance flamenco.

Vocalists, piano players and dancers are the standard fare of any Miss America Pageant, and singing contestants have been the most successful. This year, 25 of the 51 contestants from every state and the District of Columbia will sing.

There are eight piano players, four gymnasts, two ballet dancers and one woman who tap dances, two flute players, a violinist, Miss Idaho, Jennifer Hovey of Twin Falls, — and a fiddler.

Most contestants show the judges talents they have spent years developing. Miss Colorado Carol Janson, 21, of Boulder, a senior at The Juilliard School in New York City, began piano lessons at age 3 after her mother, a piano teacher, caught her picking out tunes on the keys.

Major changes in the rules for this year's pageant will make talent worth 50 percent of the judging. Points earned in the interview, swimsuit and evening gown divisions will make up the other 50 percent.

Contestants have less than three minutes to perform in the preliminaries Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, and in the nationally televised finals Saturday.

"I think I'm the bizarre talent this year," said Miss Merchant, 25, of Edmond, Okla.

A former television news anchor who wants to go to law school, Miss Merchant said she learned while working as master of ceremonies at local pageants that her self-deprecating humor was popular with audiences.

She declined to discuss her routine except to say she talks about her mother and about preparing for the pageant.

Miss Kara, 23, of Las Vegas, Nev., picked up at age 7 a pair of castanets that were around her dance teacher's studio and has studied flamenco ever since.

Miss Heussner, 21, of Pekin, Ill., who has written two plays and wants to teach drama, chose to perform an excerpt from "The Belle of Amherst" by William Luce.

Miss Barill, 23, of Charleston, W.Va., said her performance to the tune, "Jump, Shout, Boogie" is based on "some pure classical ballet."

Angry panel votes to bar agency use

WASHINGTON (AP) — An angry Senate subcommittee voted Tuesday to halt the Reagan administration's use of a private collection agency to demand repayment of $630 million in past-due farm debts.

"I thought the Farmers Home Administration had just about gone the limit in being hard-hearted," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who proposed the amendment banning the practice. "But this goes beyond anything I've seen."

The Appropriations subcommittee on agriculture added language to its $31 billion 1987 spending bill that would prevent the Agriculture Department from using any of its money to employ private collection agencies such as the one that has sent out 6,500 letters to farmers in recent weeks.

Reports of the tactic angered many farm-state senators, particularly because some farmers said the payment demands violated understandings they had about working out their remaining debt with local FmHA officials.

"This is the most idiotic case of bureaucracy run amok," Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., complained. Andrews said the collection agency was hired without the knowledge of Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng.

Harkin's amendment was adopted unanimously after subcommittee Chairman Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., noted that the administration was insisting it had legal authority to collect debts to the federal government.

"Farmers Home is doing a very poor job in dealing with this problem," Cochran added. "A great deal of insensitivity is being shown. Adopting this amendment will send a message that I think will result in a change in policy."

Justice in Pakistan to be demonstrated

More than a score of worshipers, most of them elderly men, are slaughtered in an Istanbul synagogue. Aboard an airliner in Karachi frustrated and panicky gunmen open fire, killing at least 18 passengers and wounding 90.

The world, at least those in it who refuse to find excuses for cold-blooded acts of terrorism, responds with horror, revulsion and outrage. Once again innocent civilians have been made casualties on an ever-shifting ideological battleground. Once again indiscriminate murder has been committed in an obscenely warped effort to advance a cause.

That cause can be readily inferred, but not precisely identified. There was a time when specific groups, most of them part of the Palestine Liberation Organization, were quick to claim responsibility for terrorist acts.

In time the lesson sank in that such gloating inevitably invited retaliation, usually by Israeli air attacks that sometimes harmed the claimants and sometimes did not.

Most experts on terrorism continue to see close cooperation if not central direction in recent terrorist incidents. Some of these experts suspect that both the Istanbul and Karachi incidents were the work of Abu Nidal, who divides his time between Syria and Libya. But proving that will be hard.

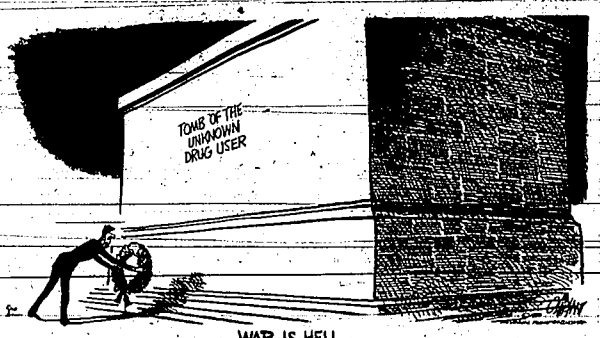

The Istanbul synagogue was an easy target because that city's Jewish community, which has long felt secure and accepted, had never sought special police protection. The penetration by the terrorists of supposedly tight security at the Karachi airport and the apparent failure of Pakistani commandos to conduct timely rescue operations both remain to be explained.

Meanwhile, Israel promises retribution for the massacre of Jews in Istanbul, and Pakistan promises justice for the terrorists whom it holds.

As for justice in Pakistan, which has been quick to reaffirm its sympathy and support for the Palestinian cause, that remains to be demonstrated.

Stephen J. Morse

We must be honest about the harmful consequences of fighting drugs through criminal law and enforcement. I recently argued that for reasons beyond its control law enforcement cannot win the war on drugs. Now I suggest that the effects of criminalization may threaten the morality and safety of American society more than drug use itself.

The economics of the drug trade are the root of the problem. The production of most dangerous drugs is relatively easy and inexpensive, but criminalization makes them enormously costly to users and monstrously profitable to traffickers.

For example, one study indicates that daily heroin users each consume more than $17,000 worth of drugs per year. Without the crime tariff the cost would probably not differ much from a pack-a-day cigarette habit.

The criminalization markup for cocaine is even greater. Estimates of the yearly value of the illicit drug trade range as high as $110 billion, much of which is profit to the criminals in the chain of production and supply.

Consider the effects of the criminalization markup on users. Although experts dispute the exact numbers of robberies, burglaries and other crimes that drug users commit to pay for drugs, all agree that users, especially heavy users, commit great numbers of crimes. Wealthier users who need not commit crimes also spend large sums in the unproductive drug trade rather than in the productive economy. Many users must abandon careers and turn to crime to pay for drugs. And the criminal prohibition promotes a drug-outlaw subculture that encourages both use and more crime.

Criminalization also increases the power of drug traffickers and organized crime. The drug trade provides Gargantuan sums of money that are used for terrifying purposes. Profits buy technology, manpower and silence to defeat law enforcement.

Worse yet, traffickers corrupt law enforcement and government officials at home and abroad. The failure to win the war on drugs and the corruption that it breeds cause disrespect for and loss of confidence in both law enforcement and government.

The illicit gains of drug trafficking are employed to infiltrate legitimate businesses, which are then subject to the use of intimidation and corruption. The drug trade may well create a corrupt state and economy within our nation.

Moreover, drug trafficking, although dangerous, is so easy, exciting and above all lucrative that its allure undercuts the work ethic and mocks the life style of those who toil legitimately. Our nation's traditional values and morale both suffer.

Criminalization also produces dangerous changes in the law and law-enforcement practices. Constant pressure is exerted to limit constitutional protections of privacy and security by expanding the power of the government to use intrusive methods such as electronic surveillance.

Criminalizing drugs creates international problems. The substantial dollars spent for drugs abroad are not repatriated, thus worsening the balance of payments. The drug-trafficking underworld uses its profits to bankroll arms smuggling, insurgency, espionage and terrorist activities that strike at our security.

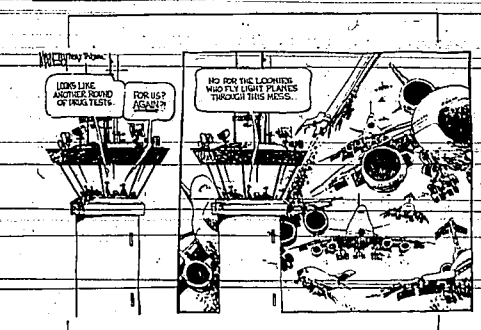

The drug traffic also interferes with foreign relations. As recent experience with Mexico demonstrates, attempts to impose our drug policies and enforcement practices on other nations creates tension and ill will. Because traffickers corrupt foreign officials, these officials are disreputable and unreliable allies.

Finally, the criminal-justice system's war on drugs directly costs staggering billions. The federal drug-abuse outlay alone will be close to $2 billion in 1986. State and local costs are higher. Given the myriad needs for each tax dollar — including other, more important, law-enforcement needs — we can no longer afford to subsidize the ineffective criminalization strategy.

If criminal law and enforcement reduced drug use to tolerable levels, we might find the inevitable bad consequences acceptable. But — despite some temporary, limited successes — law enforcement cannot win the drug war, and the ill effects of criminalization are both intolerable and increasing.

How much longer will we put up with the crime, corruption and misery that criminalization creates? We must debate dispassionately, and perhaps even take a chance with, a new strategy.

Woodrow Wilson: Architect of football

Stephen Dujack

He was a Vince Lombardi of the 19th century, a Gipper of the Gay Nineties, an architect of sport who helped bring us the game of football as we know it today — a man who before winning the Nobel Peace Prize made history by shouting, "Kill him, kill him" when an opponent fouled one of his players.

We're talking about the great idealist himself: Woodrow Wilson.

His leadership showed itself early.

One rainy day in the late fall of 1889, the Lehigh football team had quickly run up a two-touchdown lead over Wesleyan.

"Then suddenly from the bleachers, a man wearing a black raincoat, heavy rubber boots and carrying a rolled umbrella came out to face the glum Cardinal rans from the sidelines," a historian wrote of Wilson, who was faculty representative to the Wesleyan squad and designer of its playbook.

"He chided them for not cheering, urging: 'Now is just the time to yell.' Whereupon he began to lead them in the Cardinal cheer . . . all the while beating out the rhythm with his umbrella. The stands came alive, the team responded," and Wesleyan went on to gain a tie.

Several presidents have been associated with football: John Kennedy and the rough-and-tumble games of touch on the lawn at Hyannisport; Richard Nixon and the failed trick play he sent in to Redskins coach George Allen during a playoff game in 1971; Gerald Ford, former all-American center. And, of course, "the Gipper." Football also has become part of the parlance of Washington, where congressmen "quarterback" committees and attempt "end runs" around their opponents.

But who would associate the ascetic and scholarly Woodrow Wilson — the man who "kept us out of war" — with this violent game? Americans remember this peacemaker as slight and ailing, and even a contemporary on the faculty at Princeton wrote that he "had never known him to indulge in any sport."

Yet he fervently worked for the success of a game that early on became notorious for killing and maiming scores of college students every year. "There's murder in that game," said heavyweight boxing champion John L. Sullivan after viewing a Harvard-Yale match.

Wilson spurred the game's evolution and reform over more than 30 years, even taking time out from his White House schedule to answer queries from his alma mater about the team.

In the hours following his election to the governorship of New Jersey, he went to see the Princeton football team practice. In 1912, after winning the White House, he again took in an afternoon Princeton practice, where "the football players kept at their scrimmage and kicking just as if the next president of the United States wasn't looking on," a newspaper records.

Even so, football may have been less important to Wilson than Wilson was to football. In fact, the game would probably be vastly different today if it were not for his intervention at several critical moments — it might not be played at all.

While Wilson was studying law at University of Virginia and political science at Johns Hopkins, and teaching at Bryn Mawr and Wesleyan, the evolution of football continued. During those years, the rules were in constant flux, and the collegians bent themselves to discovering and exploiting loopholes. In the early 1880s, Princeton invented the block game — the team held the ball for the entire half. The IFA countered with the system of downs.

A few years later, strategists at both Princeton and Lehigh noticed that nothing in the rules mandated that a kickoff go to the opponent, and Princeton was the first to take advantage of this flaw with its V trick — the quarterback kicked off to himself and ran inside a wedge formed from his teammates with their arms linked. This was the first instance of what came to be called the "mass play" and achieved its ultimate form in Harvard's later development of the famous flying wedge.

In 1890, Wilson won appointment to the faculty at Princeton, where he defended the mass play against its detractors.

In December 1909, Harper's Weekly published a call for reform that forced the issue. "Dr. Hadley, Dr. Lowell, Dr. Wilson," the magazine asked of the Big Three presidents, "don't you think football, as it was played this year, is a little rough? There had been 27 deaths up to November 21st, gentlemen. . . . You could stop this kind of football if you chose. You three men. The mothers can't, poor souls."

An "informal" meeting went on for five months, but its rules changes were eventually adopted by the entire IFRC and became the basis of today's sport. The changes included prohibition of diving tackles, protection for pass receivers from interference, and final elimination of the mass play by forbidding blockers to lock arms or make contact with the ballcarrier.

Wilson, of course, supported the changes, but this former advocate of rugby rules and the mass play thought in the end that they were too lax.

At that point, football began to look like today's game. Which raises the question of what Wilson would think of the game as played in 1986.

A letter he wrote from the White House in 1914 gives a clue. "The real trouble with our teams is that they are coached too much," the president wrote.

"I think you would find that if the players were not constantly nervous lest they should be criticised and censured by the coaches for not doing exactly what they were told, they would play with a new dash and vigor that would surprise everybody."

Appreciates Drakes' attitude

Having just read my granddaughter's letter in The Times-News, supporting the Drake name, mentioning her grandmother that lives in Heritage Manor, I am that grandmother.

I want to say every word that she wrote is true as to the care, food, entertainment, cleanliness and kindness we are given by the staff as well as from the Drake family.

Having been here almost five years, I have never heard a cross word from any of the staff or Harold Drake. They try in every way to make us happy and content. It is the nearest thing to home when one must give up their own home.

I have visited patients in Sky View and Hazeldel several times. The rooms, halls and dining room were always clean, the aids were giving kind attention to the patients, often I have heard one of them call a patient honey or dear. I was there one time during meal time, the food looked appetizing as served nicely.

Dr. Drake, father of Harold Drake and grandfather of Rick, built these facilities with kindness and sympathy for his patients and us, who no longer able to manage alone due to his age, he is no longer able to manage them alone, he has turned them over to his son Harold and grandson Rick, from my observation are doing a good job of running them so as to get good help.

Rick has recently set up a day nursery, complete with a kiddy jungle with an attendant to care for the children of some of his staff, who otherwise would not be able to work.

With the respect I have for the Drake family, I resent some of the remarks I have read about how bad the patients have been treated in Sky View and Hazeldel.

I feel the Drake family have done everything possible within their power and the help of God to maintain these facilities, Sky View, Heritage and Woodstone. I, for one, really appreciate their Christian attitude toward us here in Heritage.

Look beyond the rhetoric

After reading and listening to all varied opinions on the right-to-work law, I felt moved to point out some things to my fellow citizens.

I am not, nor have been, associated with unions for the past 25 years, and am not particularly pro-union.

Many, Many thousands of dollars have been spent and will be spent promoting a right-to-work law here in Idaho. It is a fact of life that anyone investing dollars, whether it be a corporation, an investor, or a so called PAC, has foremost in mind, a return on those dollars.

In the case of investing large amounts of money in anything as chancy as a political issue, an extremely large return on the investment is anticipated. As always, those profits will come from the pockets of middle and low-income wage earners.

I invite other voters to look beyond the rhetoric, double talk, and gobbledygook from both sides, and if you are still gullible enough to believe that the financial backers behind right-to-work have your best interests at heart, please contact me, as due to recent financial reversals, I have some property to sell. It consists of a bridge located on Highway 30, between Burley and Rupert.

Nothing really needs fixing

An old proverb often referred to states: "If it isn't broke don't fix it."

The "right-to-work" people advocate that the State of Idaho step in and fix the relationship between the workers and their union.

I am a retired union worker and have worked many years under a union shop contract which requires payment of dues as a condition of employment.

As a result of my years receiving union wages, I have been able to put my children through school, buy a comfortable home and live in reasonable comfort.

I still draw retirement and medical benefits, which include health and life insurance. The health insurance has paid some very expensive hospital bills and also covers prescription drugs.

My advice is "don't fix a thing." Just vote "No" on Referendum No. 1.

He's growing more confused

I've been following with interest the articles in your paper regarding right-to-work, and must admit that I'm getting even more confused. I read the other day where the anti-right-to-work folks hired cheap out-of-state labor to prepare their mailing lists for them.

Now I understand from the article that this was because the only key punch operator in Idaho was a right-to-work supporter and "if you think that we are going to turn our mailing lists over to a right-to-worker, you're crazy."

I find it hard to believe that there is only one key punch operator in the state, or that organized labor with all its resources can't find several around.

I also don't quite understand why we are supposed to boycott non-union products and businesses, yet they are allowed to use cheap out-of-state labor. Or could it be that in the states of Washington, Oregon or California, those Meccas of organized labor, those lands of sweetness and light, where all is good and great because they have no right-to-work law, to hear them tell it, also have a great shortage of good union key punch operators.

Come on folks, who's trying to deceive who?

Key punch operators unite sent your business cards to Mr. Kearns, Ms. Wisell, and the Committee to Deceive Idahoans, sounds like they could use some help.

By the way, why would us bad, nasty right-to-workers want your lists anyway. It doesn't take any great genius to figure who's on them anyway.

NATO marines land in Norway

LARVIK, Norway (AP) — About 12,000 marines from three NATO nations began air and seaborne landings in southern Norway on Tuesday as part of the alliance's largest maritime maneuvers in 30 years.

Watched by curious villagers, the first units of 8,000 U.S. Marines and 4,000 from Britain and the Netherlands rumbled onto five small beaches and landed at three makeshift airfields near Larvik.

The exercise is part of "Northern Wedding," a series of land, sea and air maneuvers in the North Atlantic, Norway and the Baltic Sea involving 35,000 troops, more than 150 ships and hundreds of aircraft from nine nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Police distribute drawings

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Police on Tuesday distributed fingerprints and composite drawings of the two terrorists who killed 21 Jewish worshipers in a blaze of machine-gun fire at the Neve Shalom synagogue.

The two blew themselves up with three hand grenades after the attack last Saturday.

Interior Minister Yildirim Akbulut told The Associated Press that fingerprints taken from the gunmen's shattered bodies would be sent to various countries through Interpol, the international police organization, in an effort to identify them.

The composite drawings, also to be distributed by Interpol, were based on a survivor's description and on the gunmen's remains, police said.

Until Monday, police said all they knew about the gunmen was that they appeared to be Arabs in their 20s.

FBI agents gathering data

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — FBI agents conferred with Pakistani officials Tuesday on the investigation into the hijacking of the Pan Am jumbo jet.

The plane, meanwhile, took off from Karachi airport after being repaired and was en route to New York via Frankfurt, West Germany. The plane was flown by an American crew, said the Civil Aviation Administration.

The four Arab hijackers, who took over the plane Friday and held about 400 passengers hostage for 17 hours, were captured alive and are in Pakistani custody.

U.S. diplomats said FBI investigators met with local police and security officials, but they added that the case and prosecution were entirely under Pakistani control.

"They (the FBI agents) are not going to interfere, but they're prepared to assist the Pakistanis if there is a request," said one diplomat, who like the others spoke on condition of anonymity.

Bhutto to resume campaign

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Opposition leader Benazir Bhutto, just out of jail, pledged Tuesday to continue the campaign to oust President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq.

Miss Bhutto, leader of the Pakistan Peoples Party, was released Monday after 25 days in Landhi jail outside Karachi.

More than 2,000 opponents of Zia had been arrested since Aug. 13, when the government issued a ban on political activity. Officials said hundreds have been freed and most others would be released soon.

Miss Bhutto said she planned to meet with other opposition leaders and officials of her party to discuss strategy.

Egypt, Israel seek accord

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egyptian and Israeli negotiators failed to reach agreement Tuesday on a border dispute, but did not rule out a summit meeting this week between President Hosni Mubarak and Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

After five hours of talks, they said they would meet again today in a last-ditch effort to salvage the summit by resolving the dispute over the Taba resort on the Red Sea.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid has said a summit could be held only after an arbitration accord on Taba has been signed. After the talks adjourned late Tuesday he was asked if a summit was still possible.

"Yes," he replied. "If its wrapped up tomorrow, then the summit will take place."

Thursday is the only day this week that the summit could be held because Friday is the Islamic holy day and Saturday is the Jewish sabbath. Peres is to go to Washington Monday for talks with President Reagan.

Gadhafi vows to oust Mubarak

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi vowed Tuesday to try to overthrow the government of Egypt and other African countries that have recognized Israel.

Gadhafi spoke shortly after he arrived for a three-day visit in Sudan, Egypt's southern neighbor. Four planeloads of officials, journalists and security men came with him, joining hundreds of other Libyan security men and officials who arrived Monday night.

His visit came the same day the Sudan Times newspaper reported that Prime Minister Sadek el-Mahdi fired his top five military officers last week because they had urged him to distance himself from Gadhafi.

Speaking with reporters, Gadhafi blamed Egypt's 1979 peace treaty with Israel for "Arab losses" among African countries. Four African nations have recognized Israel since 1982.

He said he has been told by some African leaders they were not to blame so long as Egypt, the biggest Arab state, has an embassy in Israel.

Editor killed, relatives say

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — An editor of an opposition magazine banned under the new state of siege was killed after armed men who identified themselves as police took him from his home, the journalists' relatives said Tuesday.

Police denied they had arrested the victim, Jose Carrasco, but the government announced 16 left-wing dissidents were picked up in the military crackdown ordered after the attempted assassination Sunday of President Augusto Pinochet.

Carrasco's body was found Monday night outside a suburban Santiago cemetery. He had been shot in the head.

Relatives said that Carrasco, a former political exile who worked for the leftist news magazine Analisis, was taken from his home early Monday by gunmen claiming to be police.

Gen. Pinochet, the army commander who has been in power since a coup on Sept. 11, 1973, suffered a slight injury to his left hand in the guerrilla ambush but five of his bodyguards were killed.

The government declared a state of siege shortly after the grenade and submachine-gun attack on Pinochet's motorcade as it was travelling along a canyon road with the president returning to Santiago from his country residence.

Pinochet, 70, attended the funeral service for the slain bodyguards Tuesday before going to a rally in his honor.

There were estimates that about 35,000 people joined in the march down Santiago's Alameda boulevard. The official announcer placed the figure at 100,000.

The rally had been scheduled before the attempted assassination, and was intended to show support for Pinochet, who has indicated he would seek another eight years in office when his term expires in 1989.

Pinochet, wearing a white army uniform, stood on an open platform with members of his military government for more than three hours and waved both hands to the passing marchers. The bandage had been removed from his left hand.

The rally announcer, speaking over a public-address system, said, "We are here to honor a brave man who does not forgive Marxist-Leninism, to show him that Chileans reject terrorist violence and insolent foreign intervention."

There were a few incidents.

A smoke bomb went off 50 yards from the podium, briefly scattering some marchers, and police fired automatic weapons into the air to silence students heckling from a school window.

Police said 34 counterdemonstrators were arrested.

Pinochet and members of his government and the diplomatic corps, including the U.S. charge d'affaires, George Jones, attended the Roman Catholic Mass for the five police and army escorts killed in the ambush.

It is expected that military ceremonies will be held on Thursday marking the 13th anniversary of the bloody military coup that ousted the elected government of the late Marxist President Savador Allende.

Passengers tried to calm jet hijackers

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Passengers tried to calm the hijackers of a Pan Am jumbo jet in Pakistan when the lights failed, but the pirates panicked and started shooting because they could not understand English, an American survivor said Tuesday.

Nadya Hussain, 16, choked back tears as she told reporters in Wiesbaden about the horror that led to shooting aboard the jumbo jet last Friday. Nineteen people died in the shooting, and at least 120 were injured. The four hijackers are in custody.

Asked to describe the scene when the hijackers began firing at random inside the plane Friday, Miss Hussain said:

"When the lights went out, people tried to tell them (the hijackers) the power was off, but they couldn't understand English ... and they started shooting."

She said only one of the four gunmen seemed to understand English.

"When the lights began to dim, they (the hijackers) panicked because they didn't know what would happen."

They asked the passengers what had happened, and the passengers said the power was bad. But as these hijackers couldn't understand English, except for one, they panicked anyway, and they asked for a radio," she said.

Soviets say ship death toll now 257

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union increased to 257 on Tuesday the number of known dead from the collision of the passenger liner Admiral Nakhimov and a freighter in the Black Sea.

The official Tass news agency said divers had cut into the hull of the sunken passenger ship and were searching for victims.

Last week a Soviet official said there were 116 confirmed dead and 282 missing from the Aug. 31 collison between the freighter Pyotr Vasyev and the Admiral Nakhimov, which sank in less than 10 minutes.

With the revised death count of 257, 141 people were still missing and presumed dead.

Official reports say 836 people were saved from the 1,234 passengers and crew aboard the Admiral Nakhimov. No one was hurt aboard the freighter.

Justice in Pakistan to be demonstrated

More than a score of worshipers; most of them elderly men, are slaughtered in an Istanbul synagogue. Aboard an airliner in Karachi frustrated and panicky gunmen open fire, killing at least 18 passengers and wounding 90.

The world, at least those in it who refuse to find excuses for cold-blooded acts of terrorism, responds with horror, revulsion and outrage. Once again innocent civilians have been made casualties on an ever-shifting ideological battleground. Once again indiscriminate murder has been committed in an obscenely warped effort to advance a cause.

That cause can be readily inferred, but not precisely identified. There was a time when specific groups, most of them part of the Palestine Liberation Organization, were quick to claim responsibility for terrorist acts.

In time the lesson sank in that such gloating inevitably invited retaliation, usually by Israeli air attacks that sometimes harmed the claimants and sometimes did not.

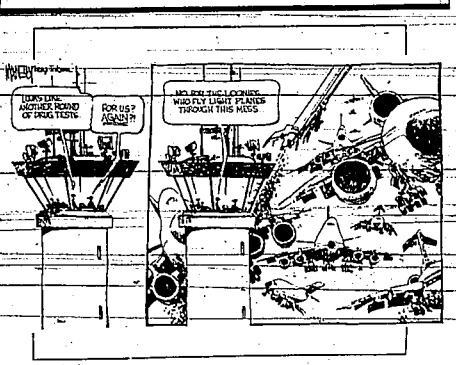

Most experts on terrorism continue to see close cooperation if not central direction in recent terrorist incidents. Some of these experts suspect that both the Istanbul and Karachi incidents were the work of Abu Nidal, who divides his time between Syria and Libya. But proving that will be hard.

The Istanbul synagogue was an easy target because that city's Jewish community, which has long felt secure and accepted, had never sought special police protection. The penetration by the terrorists of supposedly tight security at the Karachi airport and the apparent failure of Pakistani commandos to conduct timely rescue operations both remain to be explained.

Meanwhile, Israel promises retribution for the massacre of Jews in Istanbul, and Pakistan promises justice for the terrorists whom it holds.

As for justice in Pakistan, which has been quick to reaffirm its sympathy and support for the Palestinian cause, that remains to be demonstrated.

Drug trade economics root of problem

We must be honest about the harmful consequences of fighting drugs through criminal law and enforcement. I recently argued that for reasons beyond its control law enforcement cannot win the war on drugs. Now I suggest that the effects of criminalization may threaten the morality and safety of American society more than drug use itself.

The economics of the drug trade are the root of the problem. The production of most dangerous drugs is relatively easy and inexpensive, but criminalization makes them enormously costly to users and monstrously profitable to traffickers.

Stephen J. Morse

For example, one study indicates that daily heroin users each consume more than $17,000 worth of drugs per year. Without the crime tariff the cost would probably not differ much from a pack-a-day cigarette habit.

The criminalization markup for cocaine is even greater. Estimates of the yearly value of the illicit drug trade range as high as $110 billion, much of which is profit to the criminals in the chain of production and supply.

Consider the effects of the criminalization markup on users. Although experts dispute the exact numbers of robberies, burglaries and other crimes that drug users commit to pay for drugs, all agree that users, especially heavy users, commit great numbers of crimes. Wealthier users who need not commit crimes also spend large sums in the unproductive drug trade rather than in the productive economy. Many users must abandon careers and turn to crime to pay for drugs. And the criminal prohibition promotes a drug-outlaw subculture that encourages both use and more crime.

Criminalization also increases the power of drug traffickers and organized crime. The drug trade provides Gargantuan sums of money that are used for terrifying purposes. Profits buy technology, manpower and silence to defeat law enforcement.

Worse yet, traffickers corrupt law-enforcement and government officials at home and abroad. The failure to win the war on drugs and the corruption that it breeds cause disrespect for and loss of confidence in both law enforcement and government.

The illicit gains of drug trafficking are employed to infiltrate legitimate businesses, which are then subject to the use of intimidation and corruption. The drug trade may well create a corrupt state and economy within our nation.

Moreover, drug trafficking, although dangerous, is so easy, exciting and above all lucrative that its allure undercuts the work ethic and mocks the life style of those who toil legitimately. Our nation's traditional values and morale both suffer.

Criminalization also produces dangerous changes in the law and law-enforcement practices. Constant pressure is exerted to limit constitutional protections of privacy and security by expanding the power of the government to use intrusive methods such as electronic surveillance.

Criminalizing drugs creates international problems. The substantial dollars spent for drugs abroad are not repatriated, thus worsening the balance of payments. The drug-trafficking underworld uses its profits to bankroll arms smuggling, insurgency, espionage and terrorist activities that strike at our security.

The drug traffic also interferes with foreign relations. As recent experience with Mexico demonstrates, attempts to impose our drug policies and enforcement practices on other nations creates tension and ill will. Because traffickers corrupt foreign officials, these officials are disreputable and unreliable allies.

Finally, the criminal-justice system's war on drugs directly costs staggering billions. The federal drug-abuse outlay alone will be close to $2 billion in 1986. State and local costs are higher. Given the myriad needs for each tax dollar — including other, more important, law-enforcement needs — we can no longer afford to subsidize the ineffective criminalization strategy.

If criminal law and enforcement reduced drug use to tolerable levels, we might find the inevitable bad consequences acceptable. But — despite some temporary, limited successes — law enforcement cannot win the drug war, and the ill effects of criminalization are both intolerable and increasing.

How much longer will we put up with the crime, corruption and misery that criminalization creates? We must debate dispassionately, and perhaps even take a chance with, a new strategy.

Woodrow Wilson: Architect of football

Stephen Dujack

He was a Vince Lombardi of the 19th century, a Gipper of the Gay Nineties, an architect of sport who helped bring us the game of football as we know it today — a man who before winning the Nobel Peace Prize made history by shouting, "Kill him, kill him!" when an opponent fouled one of his players.

We're talking about the great idealist himself: Woodrow Wilson.

His leadership showed itself early.

One rainy day in the late fall of 1889, the Lehigh football team had quickly run up a two-touchdown lead over Wesleyan.

"Then suddenly from the bleachers, a man wearing a black raincoat, heavy rubber boots and carrying a rolled umbrella came out to face the glum Cardinal fans from the sidelines," a historian wrote of Wilson, who was faculty representative to the Wesleyan squad and designer of its playbook.

"He chided them for not cheering, urging 'Now is just the time to yell.' Whereupon he began to lead them in Cardinal cheer . . . all the while beating out the rhythm with his umbrella. The stands came alive, the team responded," and Wesleyan went on to gain a tie.

Several presidents have been associated with football: John Kennedy and the rough-and-tumble games of touch on the lawn at Hyannisport; Richard Nixon and the failed trick play he sent in to Redskins coach George Allen during a playoff game in 1971; Gerald Ford, former all-American center. And, of course, "the Gipper." Football also has become part of the parlance of Washington, where congressmen "quarterback" committees and attempt "end runs" around their opponents.

But who would associate the ascetic and scholarly Woodrow Wilson — the man who "kept us out of war" — with this violent game? Americans remember this peacemaker as slight and ailing, and even a contemporary on the faculty at Princeton wrote that he "had never known him to indulge in any sport."

Yet he fervently worked for the success of a game that early on became notorious for killing and maiming scores of college students every year. "There's murder in that game," said heavyweight boxing champion John L. Sullivan after viewing a Harvard-Yale match.

Wilson spurred the game's evolution and reform over more than 30 years, even taking time out from his White House schedule to answer queries from his alma mater about the team.

In the hours following his election to the governorship of New Jersey, he went to see the Princeton football team practice. In 1912, after winning the White House, he again took in an afternoon Princeton practice, where "the football players kept at their scrimmage and kicking just as if the next president of the United States wasn't looking on," a newspaper records.

Even so, football may have been less important to Wilson than Wilson was to football. In fact, the game would probably be vastly different today if it were not for his intervention at several critical moments — it might not be played at all.

While Wilson was studying law at University of Virginia and political science at Johns Hopkins, and teaching at Bryn Mawr and Wesleyan, the evolution of football continued. During those years, the rules were in constant flux, and the collegians bent themselves to discovering and exploiting loopholes. In the early 1880s, Princeton invented the block game — the team held the ball for the entire half. The IFA countered with the system of downs.

A few years later, strategists at both Princeton and Lehigh noticed that nothing in the rules mandated that a kickoff go to the opponent, and Princeton was the first to take advantage of this flaw with its V trick — the quarterback kicked off to himself and ran inside a wedge formed from his teammates with their arms linked. This was the first instance of what came to be called the "mass play" and achieved its ultimate form in Harvard's later development of the famous flying wedge.

In 1890, Wilson won appointment to the faculty at Princeton, where he defended the mass play against its detractors.

In December 1909, Harper's Weekly published a call for reform that forced the issue. "Dr. Hadley, Dr. Lowell, Dr. Wilson," the magazine asked of the Big Three presidents, "don't you think football, as it was played this year, is a little rough? There had been 27 deaths up to November 21st, gentlemen. . . . You could stop this kind of football if you chose, you three men. The mothers can't, poor souls."

An "informal" meeting went on for five months, but its rules changes were eventually adopted by the entire IFRC and became the basis of today's sport. The changes included prohibition of diving tackles, protection for pass receivers from interference, and final elimination of the mass play by forbidding blockers to lock arms or make contact with the ballcarrier.

Wilson, of course, supported the changes, but this former advocate of rugby rules and the mass play thought in the end that they were too lax.

At that point, football began to look like today's game. Which raises the question of what Wilson would think of the game as played in 1986.

A letter he wrote from the White House in 1914 gives a clue. "The real trouble with our teams is that they are coached too much," the president wrote.

"I think you would find that if the players were not constantly nervous lest they should be criticised and censured by the coaches for not doing exactly what they were told, they would play with a new dash and vigor that would surprise everybody."

Appreciates Drakes' attitude

Having just read my granddaughter's letter in The Times-News, supporting the Drake name, mentioning her grandmother that lives in Heritage Manor, I am that grandmother.

I want to say every word that she wrote is true as to the care, food, entertainment, cleanliness and kindness we are given by the staff as well as from the Drake family.

Having been here almost five years, I have never heard a cross word from any of the staff or Harold Drake. They try in every way to make us happy and content. It is the nearest thing to home when one must give up their own home.

I have visited patients in Sky View and Hazeldel several times. The rooms, halls and dining room were always clean, the aids were giving kind attention to the patients, often I have heard one of them call a patient honey or dear. I was there one time during meal time, the food looked appetizing as served nicely.

Dr. Drake, father of Harold Drake and grandfather of Rick, built these facilities with kindness and sympathy for his patients and us, who no longer able to manage alone due to his age, he is no longer able to manage them alone, he has turned them over to his son Harold and grandson Rick, from my observation are doing a good job of running them so as to get good help.

Rick has recently set up a day nursery complete with a kiddy jungle with an attendant to care for the children of some of his staff, who otherwise would not be able to work.

With the respect I have for the Drake family, I resent some of the remarks I have read about how bad the patients have been treated in Sky View and Hazeldel.

I feel the Drake family have done everything possible within their power and the help of God to maintain these facilities, Sky View, Heritage and Woodstone, I, for one, really appreciate their Christian attitude toward us here in Heritage.

Look beyond the rhetoric

After reading and listening to all varied opinions on the right-to-work law, I felt moved to point out some things to my fellow citizens.

I am not, nor have been, associated with unions for the past 25 years, and am not particularly pro-union.

Many, Many thousands of dollars have been spent and will be spent promoting a right-to-work law here in Idaho. It is a fact of life that anyone investing dollars, whether it be a corporation, an investor, or a so called PAC, has foremost in mind, a return on those dollars.

In the case of investing large amounts of money in anything as chancy as a political issue, an extremely large return on the investment is anticipated. As always, those profits will come from the pockets of middle and low-income wage earners.

I invite other voters to look beyond the rhetoric, double talk, and gobbledygook from both sides, and if you are still gullible enough to believe that the financial backers behind right-to-work have your best interests at heart, please contact me, as due to recent financial reversals, I have some property to sell. It consists of a bridge located on Highway 30, between Burley and Rupert.

Nothing really needs fixing

An old proverb often referred to states: "If it isn't broke don't fix it."

The "right-to-work" people advocate that the State of Idaho step in and fix the relationship between the workers and their union.

I am a retired union worker and have worked many years under a union shop contract which requires payment of dues as a condition of employment.

As a result of my years receiving union wages, I have been able to put my children through school, buy a comfortable home and live in reasonable comfort.

I still draw retirement and medical benefits, which include health and life insurance. The health insurance has paid some very expensive hospital bills and also covers prescription drugs.

My advice is "don't fix a thing." Just vote "No" on Referendum No. 1.

He's growing more confused

I've been following with interest the articles in your paper regarding right-to-work, and must admit that I'm getting even more confused. I read the other day where the anti-right-to-work folks hired cheap out-of-state labor to prepare their mailing lists for them.

Now I understand from the article that this was because the only key punch operator in Idaho was a right-to-work supporter and "if you think that we are going to turn our mailing lists over to a right-to-worker, you're crazy."

I find it hard to believe that there is only one key punch operator in the state, or that organized labor with all its resources can't find several around.

I also don't quite understand why we are supposed to boycott non-union products and businesses, yet they are allowed to use cheap out-of-state labor. Or could it be that in the states of Washington, Oregon or California, those Meccas of organized labor, those lands of sweetness and light, where all is good and great because they have no right-to-work law, to hear them tell it, also have a great shortage of good union key punch operators.

Come on folks, who's trying to deceive who?

Key punch operators unite! Send your business cards to Mr. Kearns, Ms. Wisell, and the Committee to Deceive Idahoans, sounds like they could use some help.

By the way, why would us bad, nasty right-to-workers want your lists anyway. It doesn't take any great genius to figure who's on them anyway.

NATO marines land in Norway

LARVIK, Norway (AP) — About 12,000 marines from three NATO nations began air and seaborne landings in southern Norway on Tuesday as part of the alliance's largest maritime maneuvers in 30 years.

Watched by curious villagers, the first units of 8,000 U.S. Marines and 4,000 from Britain and the Netherlands rumbled onto five small beaches and landed at three makeshift airfields near Larvik.

The exercise is part of "Northern Wedding," a series of land, sea and air maneuvers in the North Atlantic, Norway and the Baltic Sea involving 35,000 troops, more than 150 ships and hundreds of aircraft from nine nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Police distribute drawings

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Police on Tuesday distributed fingerprints and composite drawings of the two terrorists who killed 21 Jewish worshipers in a blaze of machine-gun fire at the Neve Shalom synagogue.

The two blew themselves up with three hand grenades after the attack last Saturday.

Interior Minister Yildirim Akbulut told The Associated Press that fingerprints taken from the gunmen's shattered bodies would be sent to various countries through Interpol, the international police organization, in an effort to identify them.

The composite drawings, also to be distributed by Interpol, were based on a survivor's description and on the gunmen's remains, police said.

Until Monday, police said all they knew about the gunmen was that they appeared to be Arabs in their 20s.

FBI agents gathering data

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — FBI agents conferred with Pakistani officials Tuesday on the investigation into the hijacking of the Pan Am jumbo jet.

The plane, meanwhile, took off from Karachi airport after being repaired and was en route to New York via Frankfurt, West Germany. The plane was flown by an American crew, said the Civil Aviation Administration.

The four Arab hijackers, who took over the plane Friday and held about 400 passengers hostage for 17 hours, were captured alive and are in Pakistani custody.

U.S. diplomats said FBI investigators met with local police and security officials, but they added that the case and prosecution were entirely under Pakistani control.

"They (the FBI agents) are not going to interfere, but they're prepared to assist the Pakistanis if there is a request," said one diplomat, who like the others spoke on condition of anonymity.

Bhutto to resume campaign

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Opposition leader Benazir Bhutto, just out of jail, pledged Tuesday to continue the campaign to oust President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq.

Miss Bhutto, leader of the Pakistan Peoples Party, was released Monday after 25 days in Landhi jail outside Karachi.

More than 2,000 opponents of Zia had been arrested since Aug. 13, when the government issued a ban on political activity. Officials said hundreds have been freed and most others would be released soon.

Miss Bhutto said she planned to meet with other opposition leaders and officials of her party to discuss strategy.

Egypt, Israel seek accord

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egyptian and Israeli negotiators failed to reach agreement Tuesday on a border dispute, but did not rule out a summit meeting this week between President Hosni Mubarak and Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

After five hours of talks, they said they would meet again today in a last-ditch effort to salvage the summit by resolving the dispute over the Taba resort on the Red Sea.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid has said a summit could be held only after an arbitration accord on Taba has been signed. After the talks adjourned late Tuesday he was asked if a summit was still possible.

"Yes," he replied. "If its wrapped up tomorrow, then the summit will take place."

Thursday is the only day this week that the summit could be held because Friday is the Islamic holy day and Saturday is the Jewish sabbath. Peres is to go to Washington Monday for talks with President Reagan.

Gadhafi vows to oust Mubarak

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi vowed Tuesday to try to overthrow the government of Egypt and other African countries that have recognized Israel.

Gadhafi spoke shortly after he arrived for a three-day visit in Sudan, Egypt's southern neighbor. Four planeloads of officials, journalists and security men came with him, joining hundreds of other Libyan security men and officials who arrived Monday night.

His visit came the same day the Sudan Times newspaper reported that Prime Minister Sadek el-Mahdi fired his top five military officers last week because they had urged him to distance himself from Gadhafi.

Speaking with reporters, Gadhafi blamed Egypt's 1979 peace treaty with Israel for "Arab losses" among African countries. Four African nations have recognized Israel since 1982.

He said he has been told by some African leaders they were not to blame so long as Egypt, the biggest Arab state, has an embassy in Israel.

Editor killed, relatives say

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — An editor of an opposition magazine banned under the new state of siege was killed after armed men who identified themselves as police took him from his home, the journalists' relatives said Tuesday.

Police denied they had arrested the victim, Jose Carrasco, but the government announced 16 left-wing dissidents were picked up in the military crackdown ordered after the attempted assassination Sunday of President Augusto Pinochet.

Carrasco's body was found Monday night outside a suburban Santiago cemetery. He had been shot in the head.

Relatives said that Carrasco, a former political exile who worked for the leftist news magazine Analisis, was taken from his home early Monday by gunmen claiming to be police.

Gen. Pinochet, the army commander who has been in power since a coup on Sept. 11, 1973, suffered a slight injury to his left hand in the guerrilla ambush but five of his bodyguards were killed.

The government declared a state of siege shortly after the grenade and submachine-gun attack on Pinochet's motorcade as it was travelling along a canyon road with the president returning to Santiago from his country residence.

Pinochet, 70, attended the funeral service for the slain bodyguards Tuesday before going to a rally in his honor.

There were estimates that about 35,000 people joined in the march down Santiago's Alameda boulevard. The official announcer placed the figure at 100,000.

The rally had been scheduled before the attempted assassination, and was intended to show support for Pinochet, who has indicated he would seek another eight years in office when his term expires in 1989.

Pinochet, wearing a white army uniform, stood on an open platform with members of his military government for more than three hours and waved both hands to the passing marchers. The bandage had been removed from his left hand.

The rally announcer, speaking over a public-address system, said: "We are here to honor a brave man who does not forgive Marxist-Leninism, to show him that Chileans reject terrorist violence and insolent foreign intervention."

There were a few incidents.

A smoke bomb went off 50 yards from the podium, briefly scattering some marchers, and police fired automatic weapons into the air to silence students heckling from a school window.

Police said 34 counterdemonstrators were arrested.

Pinochet and members of his government and the diplomatic corps, including the U.S. charge d'affaires, George Jones, attended the Roman Catholic Mass for the five police and army escorts killed in the ambush.

It is expected that military ceremonies will be held on Thursday marking the 13th anniversary of the bloody military coup that ousted the elected government of the late Marxist President Savador Allende.

Passengers tried to calm jet hijackers

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Passengers tried to calm the hijackers of a Pan Am jumbo jet in Pakistan when the lights failed, but the pirates panicked and started shooting because they could not understand English, an American survivor said Tuesday.

Nadya Hussain, 16, choked back tears as she told reporters in Wiesbaden about the horror that led to shooting aboard the jumbo jet last Friday. Nineteen people died in the shooting, and at least 120 were injured. The four hijackers are in custody.

Asked to describe the scene when the hijackers began firing at random inside the plane Friday, Miss Hussain said:

"When the lights went out, people tried to tell them (the hijackers) the power was off, but they couldn't understand English ... and they started shooting."

She said only one of the four gunmen seemed to understand English.

"When the lights began to dim, they (the hijackers) panicked because they didn't know what would happen.

"They asked the passengers what had happened, and the passengers said the power was bad. But as these hijackers couldn't understand English, except for one, they panicked anyway, and they asked for a radio," she said.

Soviets say ship death toll now 257

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union increased to 257 on Tuesday the number of known dead from the collision of the passenger liner Admiral Nakhimov and a freighter in the Black Sea.

The official Tass news agency said divers had cut into the hull of the sunken passenger ship and were searching for victims.

Last week a Soviet official said there were 116 confirmed dead and 282 missing from the Aug. 31 collison between the freighter Pyotr Vasyev and the Admiral Nakhimov, which sank in less than 10 minutes.

With the revised death count of 257, 141 people were still missing and presumed dead.

Official reports say 836 people were saved from the 1,234 passengers and crew aboard the Admiral Nakhimov. No one was hurt aboard the freighter.

L.M. Boyd — What's what

President not a god

No early American Indian ever referred to any U.S. President as a deified "Great White Father," I'm told. A conventional term of respect by and for the men among them was simply "great father." They used that, sometimes, in formal talk about the then current president.

Some archaeologists, still trying to figure out how the early Egyptians built those pyramids, say winds created conical hills, and the pyramids were built over them. A respectable theory. Conical hills are a phenomenon of desert country.

You know "e" is the most frequently used letter in English writing. Know further it's true no matter what kind of writing. It's No. 1 in cookbooks, newspapers, military manuals, fantasy and science fiction, diaries, whatever.

Q. In baseball, it's possible for a player to hit a grand slam home run without any man actually scoring. How?

A. Happens now and then. When women play.

Q. If the real name of the animal is American bison, why do we call it "buffalo"?

A. Early French hunters gave it a variation of "boeuf," their word for "beef."

FORGERY

Pickpockets and purse snatchers, sophisticated in their thievery, examine stolen checkbooks. If the victim habitually signed checks before ripping them out of the books, that victim's signature is most assuredly impressed onto the next check left therein, so makes forgery easy.

Do you buy the notion that ice cream vendors' trucks should display the same flashing lights and foldout stop signs used by school buses? It's the law in Indianapolis. Other drivers must stop when they stop just as though they were school buses.

Am told there's no recording anywhere of the voice of the man who invented voice recording, Thomas A. Edison. Odd, if true.

Neckties are said to be coming back into fashion in China. Terrible price to pay for progress. Too bad.

Ex-president can't seem to shake reputation for clumsiness

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Former President Ford can't seem to shake his reputation for clumsiness.

Ford was in the Detroit suburbs Monday to speak at a fund-raiser for Jim Dunn, the Republican candidate for the 6th Congressional District.

When he finished taking questions from reporters, Ford smiled and backed into a low-hanging chandelier.

He wasn't hurt, but the incident added to his list of minor accidents that have ranged from getting knocked over by a chair lift while skiing to hitting a spectator with a golf drive to stumbling on an airplane ramp.

Return of adult satire brings Newhart smiles

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Bob Newhart says he almost gave up on television comedy as being too juvenile eight years ago when his original "Bob Newhart Show" series was canceled.

"I thought I was finished. Even dramatic shows were exemplified by kid stuff like 'Wonder Woman,'" says the star of "Newhart," which is entering its fifth season.

"I thought to myself that with this kind of junk aimed at the 12-year-old audience, how could there be a place for me?" he recalls in an interview in the October issue of McCall's.

But now Newhart takes pride in the return of adult satire to TV situation comedy. "Look at what we have now," he says. "We've got Bill Cosby and 'Moonlighting' — and who knows, maybe 'Newhart' helped start it all."

Ferraro's campus stay didn't take much time

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro's stay on the Columbia University faculty was brief — just long enough for the university to announce that she would teach a course, and then announce that she had canceled.

The former congresswoman and Democratic vice-presidential candidate had agreed to teach a course on "Critical Issues of Public Policy" for graduate students at Columbia's School of International and Public Affairs.

The school put out a news release quoting Ferraro as saying she was excited by the prospect of working with graduate students this fall.

But on Monday, Columbia officials said Ferraro had backed out. Carol Vacchione, her spokeswoman, said the change was made because "her plans have changed . . . She had personal reasons." She would not elaborate.

Wife of Greek premier seeks summit support

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Margaret Papandreou, American-born wife of Greece's socialist premier, called on women around the world Tuesday to take part in an international petition campaign for a meaningful superpower peace summit.

Mrs. Papandreou, president of the Women's Union Of Greece and an endorser of the Coalition of Women for a Meaningful Summit, said the campaign is to start Sept. 14.

"We have agreed to start a 'Walk the Earth Peace Campaign' to collect millions of signatures as visible evidence of women's concern about nuclear disarmament," Mrs. Papandreou said at a news conferance.

She said the campaign calls for President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to reach decisions on a nuclear test ban treaty, a reduction in nuclear armaments and mutual moratoriums on anti-satellite weapons in space.

She said the campaign is endorsed by more than 150 prominent women and organizations in the United States, including Coretta Scott King and singer Barbra Streisand.

Miss America names highlight collection

BUCKLEY, Mich. (AP) — There she is, Miss Florida Swamp Cabbage. And there's a Miss Chain of Lakes, one Miss World, a Miss Sioux City Sue, a Sun Bowl Queen, an Orange Bowl Queen, a National Cherry Queen and a National Honey Queen.

But the cream of Robert Neel's autograph collection is scores of signatures from the women who served as Miss America. From Bess Myerson to Mary Ann Mobley to Phyllis George to Vanessa Williams, Neel has secured the scrawls of 42 of the 57 women who captured the crown.

"They're the nicest people you'd ever want to meet," said Neel, 68, a retiree who winters in Fort Myers, Fla., and summers in this rural community.

Neel began collecting autographs after he retired. He has 40 books containing 1,665 autographs, including tomes devoted to pro bowlers, presidents, golfers and governors.

He's received autographs from the late Princess Grace of Monaco, Christie Brinkley, Anita Bryant, Jesse Jackson, Pat Robertson, Henry Ford II and Lee Iacocca.

Western show proved to be truly far out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Star Trek" producer Gene Roddenberry says he got the television series on NBC 20 years ago by telling the network "it was a western, but with spaceships instead of horses."

"I went ape," he said. "I said 'I'm going to write what I want to write.' This would be a chance to say to the world some things I wanted to say."

Among the themes were the dangers of prejudice, even against aliens, and the need for peace, even among intergalactic superpowers.

He spoke Monday as about 1,500 people turned out at a party at Paramount Pictures to celebrate the 20th birthday of the space saga.

As Roddenberry watched the crowd, he said: "I'm surprised and pleased. I really planned to have a show only a few people would remember. I never thought there would be this attention and adulation."

PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

R: Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

X: No one under 17 admitted.

All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Thousands of Chinese pay homage to Mao 10 years after his death

PEKING (AP) — Tens of thousands of Chinese crowded into Mao Tse-tung's mausoleum Tuesday to pay silent tribute to the founder of Communist China on the 10th anniversary of his death.

The government regards Mao as a great revolutionary who, nevertheless, committed serious errors in his final years, and it has sought to stamp out the personality cult that prevailed during Mao's rule. It announced no activities to commemorate the Sept. 9, 1976, death except for new publication of books by and about Chairman Mao.

But by sheer numbers, ordinary Chinese turned the normal flow of tourists through the mausoleum, in Tiananmen Square in the heart of Peking, into an outpouring of remembrance.

People waited an hour to get in. The line was about twice as long as usual, and an official said scheduled reopening of additional rooms in the mausoleum after summer closure was postponed because of the crowds.

The official said the total number of visitors Tuesday was not immediately available.

A bouquet of flowers and a small funeral wreath at the foot of a white statue of Mao were the mausoleum's only signs of official recognition of the anniversary.

The crowds stood quietly, six abreast, shuffling toward the entrance as loudspeakers blared at them not to spit or smoke. Inside, some bowed slightly as they were ushered quickly past the crystal-encased body but showed no other emotion.

Most of those questioned said they came from outside Peking.

"We came especially for the anniversary," said Gu Zijing, 59, of Shanghai. "We are very devoted to Chairman Mao. He was the greatest of all leaders."

Gu said his group of about 30 people also would see other sights in Peking.

Asked what Mao would have thought of China now, Gu said Mao as he was in 1976 would not have liked the changes wrought by top Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping's open door policies and market-force reforms.

But had Mao lived, "he would have changed his ideas, just like the rest of us have," Gu said.

"He (Mao) created the People's Republic of China (in 1949)," said a young businessman from southern Yunnan province, who refused to give his name for publication. "People don't want to return to the time of Mao's rule, but we very much admire him."

The businessman said he had other reasons for coming to the capital, but knew people who came to Peking just for the anniversary.

Wang Yunquan, 30, of Peking, said when reminded of the chaotic 1966-76 Cultural Revolution over which Mao presided, "Chairman Mao's mistakes were fewer than his achievements."

Several tourists said they have much higher esteem for Mao than Deng, though they prefer the higher standard of living under Deng.

Former prosecutor faces drug count

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A former federal prosecutor who had been assigned to help prosecute drug cases has pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine.

Timothy Falls, 41, faces up to five years in prison and a $5,000 fine after pleading guilty Monday to possession of 0.6 grams of cocaine. Sentencing is scheduled for Oct. 31 before Hillsborough Circuit Judge Donald C. Evans.

Falls, then an eight-year veteran of the U.S. Justice Department, was assigned to the office of U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle in January to help with narcotics prosecutions.

He was arrested in April after undercover police detectives said they watched him buy just over half a gram of "crack" cocaine from a street corner dealer.

Strait recuperates from loss of voice

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer George Strait is recuperating at home in San Marcos, Texas, after missing three concerts because he lost his voice, a spokeswoman said Tuesday.

Strait missed concerts beginning Saturday in Tulelake, Calif., Salt Lake City-and-Pendleton, Ore., said spokeswoman Kay Shaw.

He hopes to resume his concert schedule Saturday in Concord, Calif., she said.

Strait, 34, is the reigning Country Music Association male vocalist of the year. His current hit is "Nobody in His Right Mind Would've Left Her."

Challenger loss cripples nation's military space programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — From spy satellites to "Star Wars," the loss of the shuttle Challenger temporarily crippled military space programs. It also wrought an expensive new approach to space at the Pentagon.

Never again will the Department of Defense put its eggs in one basket.

The military must have the shuttle, says Air Force Secretary Edward C. Aldridge Jr., but placing great reliance on the orbiters was "a major mistake for this country and we're paying the price now."

Gone are the days of a seemingly foolproof shuttle, available to the Pentagon for secret missions along with its more familiar work as a space truck hauling commercial payloads into orbit.

"We cannot afford to rely on a single launch system for launching our very critical satellites," Aldridge said recently. "The Expendable Launch Vehicles (rockets) are going to be the workhorse from now on for DoD."

Ironically, as the Pentagon moves to break its reliance on the shuttle, the military's role in the future of spaceplane is increasing. Since the Challenger's loss, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has turned over four key jobs to military officers.

The Defense Department is likely to monopolize the first few years of resumed shuttle flights; two of the first three flights have already been set aside for the military. In fact, some administration officials credit the Pentagon with helping to persuade President Reagan to replace the Challenger while restricting the access of commercial firms to the shuttle in the future.

But the military ramifications of relying solely on the shuttle have been far-reaching:

- To recover, the Pentagon now plans to spend $2.6 billion over the next five years. Assuming Congress goes along, that money will finance design and production of two new generations of unmanned rockets. Critical satellites will be designed from the ground up to fly on either the shuttle or one of the new rockets.
- By simple good luck, the nation's defense satellite system was healthy when the Challenger exploded Jan. 28, according to Gen. Larry D. Welch, the Air Force chief of staff.

"The timing was not nearly so bad as it could have been," says Welch. "We were pretty lucky."

Nonetheless, every month the shuttles stay grounded, the picture worsens.

The Challenger's loss, and the unrelated grounding of the Titan rocket following two losses over the past year, is producing a backlog of national-security payloads that will take years to overcome.

According to Aldridge, the Pentagon will have 21 payloads "sitting on the ground waiting to fly" in early 1988, when the shuttles are supposed to resume operation.

While details are sketchy, some of those satellites awaiting launch can only be boosted into orbit by the shuttle. Air Force and Pentagon officials decline to discuss the matter publicly, but sources suggest one such payload is the KH-12 — the nation's newest photo spy satellite.

President requests ship funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan formally asked Congress Tuesday for money to restore the space shuttle fleet to four ships, even as the man he picked to rehabilitate NASA declared "a fifth orbiter is absolutely imperative."

NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher said a start on the fifth ship "will have to be made in the next year or two."

Reagan's approval of a replacement for the space shuttle Challenger was announced in August, and the request for $272 million to begin the first phase of construction had been expected.

The new ship, expected to be ready to fly in 1991, will cost about $2 billion. Other replacement costs, such as spare parts and space suits, will bring the total to $2.8 billion.

Fletcher told reporters last week that the country is going to be short of launch capacity by 1992 and "we really ought to have more than four" shuttles.

Responding Tuesday to a question from The Associated Press, Fletcher explained that, "Given the extraordinary demand for shuttle space to launch scientific, military and commercial cargo, as well as the demands of the space station launch timetable, we believe a fifth orbiter is absolutely imperative."

He said the effort to lower federal deficits rules out asking for yet another ship now but "a start will have to be made in the next year or two."

Fletcher reiterated that five shuttles will be essential for putting together the space station, which will serve as a permanent manned facility in space for conducting scientific, technological and commercial activities. President Reagan has designated the station as the next major space project.

A brief White House statement said the funds requested Tuesday also would be used to implement the Rogers commission report which recommended changes in the shuttle program to avert another disaster like the one that destroyed the Challenger and killed its crew of seven last Jan. 28.

NASA also announced the formation of a task force to make recommendations on how the station will be operated. About 25 people will serve full-time on the task force and others will serve part-time as consultants.

Libya claims it has body of U.S. flier

WASHINGTON (AP) — Libyan government officials — responding for the first time to U.S. diplomatic inquiries about the remains of an American airman shot down during last April's raids — say Libya does, in fact, have the body, administration sources said Tuesday.

The answer to the U.S. inquiries has been judged "unsatisfactory," however, because the Libyan officials refused to offer any evidence or means of positive identification, the sources continued.

One Air Force F-111 bomber was lost during the April 15 raids on terrorist facilities inside Libya. The Pentagon subsequently declared the two crewmen killed in action.

A short time later, Libyan television displayed two helmets that it claimed had washed ashore from the Mediterranean Sea. Then on May 6, Libyan television showed pictures of a body that it claimed was found on the shoreline in an aviator's flight suit.

The administration intends to pursue the matter further, the sources added, but also intends to reiterate its position that it will not "negotiate" for the body and that any remains should be returned without delay on humanitarian grounds.

"On an official level through intermediaries, the Libyans are saying they have a body," said a ranking administration official who requested anonymity.

Scheduling problems prompt moviemakers to leave Arco

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

ARCO — Cannon Film Co. will stage its otherworldly battle scene for "Masters of the Universe" at a desert other than Craters of the Moon National Monument.

The moviemaker's crews started moving out of Arco Tuesday because of scheduling difficulties, co-producer Elliott Shick said.

"Scheduling problems make it necessary to film that portion of the film at the end of our projected schedule during October," he said. The filming originally was set to begin Sept. 22 and would have brought close to 400 crew members and extras to Arco, the nearest city to Craters of the Moon.

At that time of the year, the risk of snow is much greater than in early fall. The high desert of the Monument could become snow-covered, masking its stark, rugged features, Cannon spokeswoman Karine Joret said.

Since late last week, state officials and Idaho's congressmen have frantically been trying to exempt the film from an environmental assessment, required by the National Park Service, because of some planned special effects.

Cannon Films had sought permission to burn 1,500 tires in containers to create smoke for the battle between the Masters of the Universe and invaders from another planet.

Although Cannon won permission from the Idaho Division of Air Quality, the National Park Service demanded a detailed environmental assessment after receiving an application late in August and discovering the quantity of smoke produced. Craters of the Moon Superintendent Bob Scott said.

"We concluded — after all the things we got from the state and so forth — that the smoke was not appropriate for use in the park," he said. An environmental study, which requires scientific evidence, can be a time-consuming process.

Mike Flynn, associate producer for the movie, told The Times-News Tuesday that the smoke issue had no impact on the decision to withdraw. "It was really not a factor in our decision," he said. "I think basically we wanted to shoot six days at Arco . . . and it became apparent to us through scouts and planning that it became a greater risk (of bad weather) than we wanted to take."

Cannon Films expressed "deep regret" at its move and complimented Idaho Gov. John Evans, state officials in the Department of Commerce, the Park Service, and Arco residents for their hospitality.

Idaho Travel Director Ralph McMullen described Cannon's decision as "disappointing." He had spent his personal time on weekends and after hours in attracting the movie.

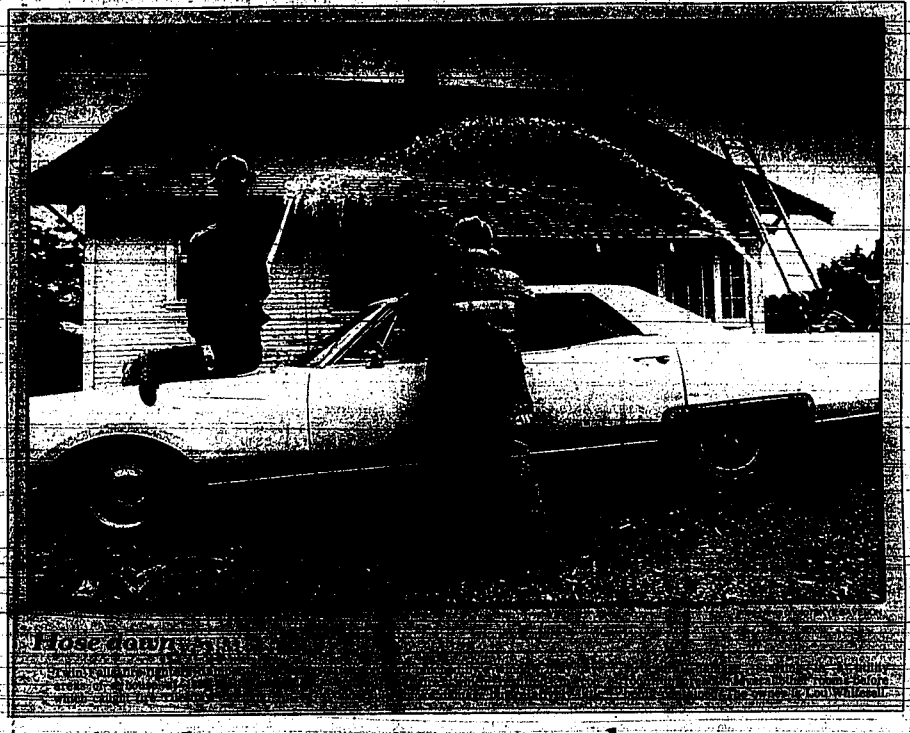

The $15 million movie would have brought $1 million to Idaho, he said. Much of that would have gone to Arco, where residents had arranged lodging for 140 crew members in motels and private houses and dozens of rented motor homes. The film company had planned to hire 200-250 people as "extras" for battle scenes.

David Northrup, owner of Lost River Lumber Co., was one of the Arco residents who helped — and benefitted from — the filmmaking crews. "The whole back of my lumberyard is full of spaceship parts," he said Tuesday morning. "They're going to load up at 2 o'clock for L.A."

Sally Perle, casting director for background actors, was one of the Cannon employees boarding the outbound trucks. "We're packing up and our staff is just a little bit sick about the thing," she said. The local people had welcomed them "far above the call of duty," Perle said.

Hospital plan questioned at Buhl hearing

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BUHL — Response to a plan to transfer ownership of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center to a non-profit corporation was cool in Buhl Tuesday night.

"I can see a pitfall in this, folks. A very bad one," said Jean Turnbaugh.

Turnbaugh came to a public hearing attended by about 30 persons armed with a battery of questions based on her past experience with a Nevada committee studying the same question the commissioners are studying: Should control of the county hospital be transferred to a local, non-profit corporation to give it more flexibility in facing competitors?

Turnbaugh, who said she served as an elected official and a study committee member in a suburb of Las Vegas four years ago, said that when her group looked at other hospitals which had been transferred to local non-profit corporations "the headache they had out for the board . . . was simply astronomical."

She said the transfer appeared to have complicated hospital management of a number of levels, from day-to-day operations to bonding for expansion.

The committee she served on went the opposite direction from what is being proposed for MVRMC. Instead of setting up a corporation and turning over responsibility for the hospital to it, the committee persuaded the Nevada Legislature to pass a law putting responsibility for the hospital squarely on the shoulders of the county board of commissioners.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Judy Felton said the idea was novel and she will be seeking out Turnbaugh to ask her for more information on her experience in studying the problem of keeping a county hospital afloat.

Turnbaugh said the bill was hard to sell, but made sense. "Due to the fact that they (the county commissioners) don't sit as a hospital board, they simply can't have a direct relationship to the day-to-day operations. Much of the responsibility is falling through the cracks," she told The Times-News after the public hearing.

"I'm just a little bit jaundiced about this," Zada Wisecaver told the commissioners. She said the move to free the hospital for growth looks familiar. "I think we've had this before. I remember when we needed a lot more room, and now we can't fill it," she said.

County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman told her the transfer of the hospital to a non-profit corporation would help the local hospital hold onto more of the medical business in the area by allowing it to enter into partnerships with

TWIN FALLS — Republican congressional candidate Mel Richardson said Tuesday he has tempered his "Get government out of farming" slogan.

"I have. What I want to do is respond to the needs of the farmers," he said in a Tuesday morning press conference at Republican campaign headquarters in downtown Twin Falls.

Richardson said that as he has travelled the 2nd Congressional District in search of votes, farmers have told him they want to get rid of government programs, "but we need some help in some areas."

Government spending on behalf of farmers should take the form of funding for research and marketing, not production supports, he said.

Research should be oriented towards increasing profitability at current levels of production, not increasing overall productivity, said Richardson. Cutting production costs will not boost production; the market is going to dictate that farmers will not grow more, he said.

Tariffs, quotas, and the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs should be used as tools to establish "a free, fair world market," he said. Protectionism is not the answer, but occasionally a tarrif or trade restriction may serve to prove a point, he said.

While he acknowledged that sugar producers such as Amalgamated Sugar in Twin Falls might not exist without trade restrictions on foreign sugar, he said restrictions on Cuban sugar dumping might eliminate the need for protection. He said he could not criticize Rep. Richard Stallings' record of support for the sugar program.

Richardson said he wants to challenge the perception that his opponent, incumbent Democrat Stallings, has been responsive to the needs of farmers and has served them well. Richardson repeated his recent criticism of Stallings' vote on the 1985 Farm Bill and said Stallings bragged about the whole-herd dairy buy-out program, which Richardson said has not succeeded in curbing production of milk.

The use of agricultural commodities in non-food products and the development of new crops is an important goal, he said. Potato ice cream, specialty potato chips, and ethanol from barley are the kinds of developments Richardson said should be en-

10 witnesses appear before grand jury

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BOISE — The suspense of whether or not a Twin Falls police commander will be indicted by a federal grand jury in connection with submitting improper expense vouchers for federal court testimony last May still hung over the Police Department Tuesday night.

Four Twin Falls police officers and a city finance official were subpoenaed to testify in a grand jury inquiry here Tuesday afternoon. Witnesses called from Twin Falls included Public Safety Director Tim Qualls, detectives Ike Kistler, Don Walden and Howard Elliott, Deputy City Clerk Jewel Chandler also went to Boise to answer questions.

They were among 10 witnesses who testified during the jury's inquiry about the expense vouchers of Twin Falls Police Commander Pat Bermingham. All five witnesses and Bermingham, who went to Boise but did not testify, left the capital city after an overtime jury session, still waiting for the jury's findings.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Dana Biehl said at the close of the session, at 6:30 p.m., that a decision may not be made for as long as two or more weeks. However, a clerk said jury votes are usually forthcoming within a week.

The deep secrecy that is maintained concerning the grand jury operations prevented Biehl from even reporting how many jurors were empaneled. However, a witness said there were 24 and that in addition to questions from Biehl, they offered their own information.

The hearing was scheduled for 1 p.m., but some jury business left over from the morning session kept the Twin Falls degation waiting until nearly 3 p.m.

Qualls was questioned for nearly an hour and carried several large envelopes of documents into the courtroom with him. Elliott's appearance required 30-40 minutes, and the three others were in the grand jury room no more than 10-15 minutes each.

Witnesses were told not to discuss testimony with the press. Biehl was overheard to say that other witnesses included two from the U.S. Marshall's Office.

Elliott reported the voucher incident to the U.S. Marshall's office and was reprimanded for going outside of local channels with his complaint. Both Walden and Bermingham were suspended without pay for 30 days, but were called back to work after two weeks because of manpower shortages.

"In a grand jury investigation, nothing can be said about the jury or its cases and defendants until indictments are handed down, or until there are none issued," Biehl told The Times-News.

He said that once decisions on the cases are made, jurors return to the courtroom and announce their findings. The information then becomes part of the court record and is made public, he said.

Reports are that Bermingham and Walden, who testified in the Mitch Campbell drug case in U.S. District Court last May, stayed in Boise two nights, but turned in expenses for three nights and drove back to Twin Falls one night, returning to Boise the next morning.

Walden was not involved in the grand jury investigation, as he was a defense witness. Bermingham testified for the U.S. Attorney's Office.

New direction taken on ag center project

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The loss of a federal grant and a shift in emphasis by its supporters have pushed the proposed Idaho agricultural trade center in the Magic Valley off into the future.

Instead of trying to launch the center independently, the Magic Valley Agricultural Cooperative is reassessing the project to see if it fits into a state development thrust, said spokesman Mike Glenn, who has been working on the project.

"We felt like what we really needed to do was regroup on the thing . . . and maybe we need to develop the concept beyond a center to an Idaho Trade Development Program," he said.

The Twin Falls-based Institute and the Region IV Development Association of Twin Falls recently lost a $25,000 grant from the U.S. Economic Development Administration. The grant would have paid for a feasibility study assessing the need for the center, its operations, location, funding and other details.

"They liked the project, but they just ran out of money," Glenn said. "That doesn't mean it could not be funded in the next year."

The International Agricultural Trade Development Center was envisioned as a place where Idaho's farm products could be shown to foreign trade teams. Its staff also would be able to bring buyers and sellers together and analyze what can be done to encourage foreign trade in farm products statewide.

The Idaho Department of Agriculture, the University of Idaho, state Department of Commerce and private-industry boosters are among the participants. A primary thrust is to tie together fragmented efforts.

"What we've got is a standing army that nobody's putting together and making work as a total entity," Glenn said.

The thrust may or may not include an agricultural trade center somewhere in Idaho, he

Rain complicates street overlay project

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Recent rains have created problems for the city's current street overlay project, City Engineer Gary Young said Monday at a Twin Falls City Council work session.

Special cloth material, which had been glued to the strip of Locust Street from Addison to 8th Avenue, is now saturated and continued work on the road must be delayed two or three days for it to dry out, he said.

The entire project is about three-quarters of the way finished, Young added. The city has $120,000 left to spend on the project, which is expected to sufficiently cover expenses.

The city's chip-seal project, which is recovering several city roads, was one full day away from completion Monday. Continued work was set aside Tuesday due to weather problems. Young said it will take a full working day of good weather before the roads are finished.

Street painting on the recovered areas is expected to start next week, Young said.

The Grandview interceptor project, the replacement of a large section of the main sewage line, has been set to start around Thanksgiving. The time was set by the project's contractors, Summit Construction, and is "a little optimistic," Young said.

During the time of construction, a 1,400-foot pump line will direct the water around the area to be replaced.

The project to improve water pressure in the southeast corner of the city will begin soon, City Manager Tom Courtney said. Plans and specifications are due in by the first of October, and the project should be completed by March.

Courtney projected no increase in water rates and a 3-percent increase in sewage rates. He added, though, that information about the possible increase was not yet good enough to go by.

In other business, the final report and recommendations to the City Council from the King Videocable Review Committee were submitted. The findings and recommendations were:

• that the cable company could have done a better job explaining its rate increase to the public. The company should have limited publicity to the facts at hand — that there was a rate

Miss Idaho happy with results of judges' interview

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — After 36 hours in Atlantic City preparing for the 1986 Miss America pageant, Jennifer Hovey, of Twin Falls, got down to business Tuesday and was more than happy with the results.

Tuesday was the interview between the judges and the contestants.

"I felt my interview went very well — as well as any I have had," Hovey said. "They had seven minutes of questions about everything from teenage pregnancy to what the name Frank Church means to me and to Idaho.

"I felt I answered all the questions well, and the main thing was, we were all smiling all the time, and I left them laughing," Hovey said with a chuckle.

She said she has been overwhelmed by the support she has received from Idaho in general and Twin Falls in particular.

"My room is full of flowers and cards and telegrams. Everyone has been very supportive," she said.

Hovey said the climate of Atlantic City is totally oriented to the pageant.

"I have been very flattered by the people here," she said. "If I go into a store, a salesperson or someone says something like 'You must be a contestant.' It's very head-turning and very flattering."

The Idaho delegation, composed of men and women who were tuned in to the political machinations of the event, are optimistic about the start. So far, Hovey seems to be a favorite of the media photographers.

Glenda Thornton, of Boise, the Idaho pageant executive director, feels the local reception of Hovey has been good, and some inside connections are giving her a solid chance of making the final 10.

"Everything has gone well so far," Thornton said. "We'll have a good idea of what to expect by Friday. I think we will know then if a final 10 selection is probable for Saturday."

In addition to her interview, Hovey participated in the boardwalk parade Tuesday night.

Today Hovey has evening gown competition, with her swim suit and talent judging slated for Thursday and Friday.

Meanwhile, Karen Falk, Hovey's foster mother for this year, announced that U.S. Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, will host a reception in Washington, D.C., from 6-8 p.m. next Tuesday at the Longworth Building. Idaho congressional delegates are expected to attend, according to Rusty Jesser, former Twin Falls resident who is heading up the function. The reception will be followed by an evening cruise down the Potomac River.

Sawtooth acreage slated for burn

TWIN FALLS — More than 2,100 acres on the Sawtooth National Forest are slated for intentional burning this fall by U.S. Forest Service crews.

"Our primary objectives in using fire are to improve specifically identified areas for wildlife habitat, grazing for domestic livestock and to reduce fire hazards," said Dale Jarrell, fire management officer for the SNF. "We have prepared burning plans for each one of our projects. As soon as weather conditions permit the safe and controlled use of fire, we will begin burning."

Burning is scheduled to take place in 12 different areas of the forest. Burns are planned for the West Dry and Fish Creek areas in the Blackpine and Albion divisions of the Burley Ranger District. In addition, isolated areas of residue left by firewood will be treated with fire.

Approximately 650 acres of limbs and tree tops in the firewood cutting areas of the South Hills will be burned later this fall. Fire will be used here to eliminate a serious fire hazard. The use of prescribed fire in these areas also helps to prepare a seedbed for regeneration of trees.

Burning on the Ketchum Ranger District will include areas in the North Fork of Deer Creek, Warm Springs, Baker Creek and Bald Mountain. The Bald Mountain project involves the burning of residue from the removal of dead and diseased trees in the groves of timber that separate the ski runs.

The Sawtooth National Recreation Area plans three burn projects, for a total of 520 acres, located near Stanley Creek and in the French Creek and East Fork/Bowery areas of the East Fork Salmon River drainage.

An estimated 200 acres of logging residue in the Marsh Creek area of the Fairfield Ranger District are planned for burning. Work on this project will not take place until late in the fall or after the first snowfall.

Spud harvest in gear; prices hold

BOISE (AP) — With market prices holding at around the $6 level, the Idaho potato harvest has begun moving east across the state this week, but the Agriculture Department reported increasing problems with "hollow heart."

Statewide, 7 percent of the harvest was completed by the end of last week, two points higher than normal but below last year's pace of 11 percent at the same time, the Agricultural Statistics Service reported in its weekly crop update.

"Most of the harvesting activity took place in the southwest and south-central areas as weather conditions slowed activity in the east," the service said, rating the crop in generally good condition across the state.

But, the service said, "hollow heart problems were appearing," and with harvest just beginning in eastern Idaho the USDA survey said "hollow heart problems in Norgolds had become apparent."

Although the condition does not affect the size of the potato, it leaves affected spuds with a cavity in the center that signficantly reduced their value. Reports of hollow heart problems have also come in from Oregon and Washington growers.

The eastern Idaho harvest was 4 percent complete compared to 1 percent a year ago and 2 percent on average. The service said 46 percent had vines dying or killed.

Service to give a permit and to convince Cannon Films to stay at Craters of the Moon ended Tuesday, despite heavy lobbying in Washington since last Friday. Gov. John Evans sent a personal telegram to Interior Secretary Don Hodel. U.S. Sen. Jim McClure, R-Idaho, and U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, also were asked to intervene. However, an Interior Department spokesman said Hodel likely had not even read the telegram because he had been out of town and had been busy on his return.

McClure criticized Evans in a press release Tuesday, saying Evans' pleas for help had arrived too late for any effective action in Washington.

The discussions behind the smoke issue are smoky themselves.

McMullen said Cannon Films had sought air-quality approval very late in August, although the question had been discussed earlier. The company was surprised, he said, when they found the federal government wanted environmental clearance.

Scott said the Park Service informed Cannon Films early in August that "we needed something in writing from them before we could make a decision."

However, all said they are dismayed that "Masters of the Universe" will not be fighting at the lava fields in eastern Idaho.

Cannon has not yet selected an alternate site for the filming of the battle scene, although it probably will be a desert location, Flynn said.

couraged to diversify and deepen commodity markets.

Abroad, the United States should "finance its competition by offering low-interest loans to competing commodity-producing countries, he said, and pledged support for a bill now in Congress that would limit such loans.

Richardson said the recently announced bonus bushel program, under which certain trading partners will be given surplus wheat to "moisten grain deals, will be one way to re-establish some of those markets."

He hopes that if the government is pulled out of agricultural markets, it will not eliminate family farms. "I would hate to see the demise of the family farm," he said.

He said the work ethic of America largely grew out of farm backgrounds, but "I don't think we can tax the people of America so we can keep that situation," he said.

Richardson's handouts at the press conference said the long-term solution to farm problems is to diminish the federal role in agriculture. Other parts of his agricultural policy are:

• hold commodity imports to domestic standards for quality;

• avoid any more embargoes such as the Russian grain embargo;

• convene an international trade summit;

• control the deficit;

• establish and fund rural enterprise zones;

• encourage new technologies;

• give tax breaks to farmers who finance themselves.

Richardson said the press conference was the first of what will be a series of press conferences about issues affecting Idaho.

said.

The informal task force now is considering developing a "white paper," assessing ways to market Idaho's agricultural products effectively. Private industry may be willing to donate executives' time to do study, said Glenn, assistant to president at College of Southern Idaho. He calls himself a "loaned executive" working on the project.

The state also is trying to harness its agencies together, says Rick Phillips, assistant to Idaho Director of Agriculture Dick Rush. Agriculture officials will meet with counterparts in the state Department of Commerce and University of Idaho this week, he said.

The Magic Valley Agricultural Institute is a small, loosely organized group of business people and farmers from the Twin Falls area. They brainstormed the idea for the agricultural trade center late last year. The group also has sponsored two seminars and produces a quarterly newsletter. Its purpose is to foster development of agri-business within Southern Idaho.

C.L. "Foggy" Fisher of Kimberly, an organizer of the group, said: "I think the agricultural institute is still a good idea, and I think it will develop." He agreed that little is likely to happen soon on the project.

Glenn said he hopes to get Institute members together within the next week to discuss the new approach.

Woman charged in two-car crash

JEROME — A Twin Falls woman whose car collided with one driven by an off-duty Jerome police officer, is free on bond after being charged with driving while intoxicated.

Idaho State Police Cpl. Doug McFall said Willamina Barney, 26, left the scene of the accident after her car collided with one driven by Curtis Cooley, 25, of Jerome. She then returned and was cited, McFall said. She suffered a minor head injury but was not hospitalized.

The accident occurred at Alder Street and D Avenue about 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

With Barney were her two children, Kenney, 7, and Christy, 9. Both escaped injury.

Cooley was accompanied by Travis Shepherd, 16, of Jerome. They were uninjured but damage was estimated at $4,000 to the Cooley 1984 sedan and $1,000 to the 1980 car driven by Barney.

businessmen.

Bob Bailey said he finds it disturbing that medical doctors "still use other laboratories to the detriment of the hospital." He asked the board what assurances they have that local doctors will be more loyal to the hospital.

Doctor Paul Miles was asked by the commissioner to respond, and said that when the competing laboratory was built by doctors, the hospital's lab was "not up to par."

Former state senator John Barker made no comment on the plan but asked the board and hospital staff on hand to outline the hospital's debts. He was told by hospital Administrator John Bingham that the hospital has made one principal payment on the $26 million bond that paid for the most recent major renovation at the hospital. That debt was refinanced last year at a lower interest rate for a total amount of $29 million, hospital Comptroller Don Crilly said.

There will be another hearing on the proposal tonight in Twin Falls at 7 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho in the mini-auditorium.

Hot water rule battle looms

BOISE (AP) — New regulations to protect Idaho streams and lakes from pollution may be adopted by the state — but it appears that won't happen without a major battle.

Gov. John Evans on Monday unveiled proposed regulations covering nonpoint source pollution. That's water pollution with no clearly definable source, such as from logging, farming, mining or recreation.

But at Tuesday's Idaho Land Board meeting, state Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans expressed his reservations about the proposals.

And a spokesman for the Idaho Forest Industry Council, Executive Vice President Joe Hinson, called the proposals unfair, because they single out the timber industry for regulation not required of other possible sources of water contamination.

Last session, Gov. Evans vetoed legislation easing regulations designed to protect water quality. He appointed a task force to come up with new rules.

They were unveiled Monday, and Evans described them as a compromise. In essence, they would require loggers to adopt "best management practices" to guard against water contamination.

The Department of Health and Welfare would monitor streams, and if biological data indicated deterioration of water quality, the Department of Lands would modify the "best management practices" plans to cause less pollution.

Jerry Evans said it appeared to him that would take the Department of Lands, and the Land Board which sets policy, out of the process and practically give Health and Welfare control over the forest harvest plans.

"This board is not going to give up its ability to determine what best management practices are," said Evans.

Eventually, Gov. Evans appointed a subcommittee of Attorney General Jim Jones, Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa and Auditor Joe Williams to review the proposals and make a recommendation.

The proposals will be presented later in the week to the Board of Health and Welfare.

But in a letter to Chairman Dr. Fred Marineau, Hinson said the forest industry cannot support the proposals.

Hinson said the water standards are not defined, and loggers have no idea how restrictive they will be. "Thus, accepting this proposal means that we have no idea how restrictive a water quality criteria-based standard might be, and we cannot accept the proposal until we do," he said.

Hinson also said:

- There is no known link between biological data, such as the amount of algae or insects in a stream, and specific changes in management practices which will impact that data.
- There are a number of sources of pollution of Idaho's water, including recreation, farming, mining and logging. Yet only logging would be regulated to guard against pollution. Hinson called that an "inherent inequity" and all sources of pollution should be similarly regulated.
- Since there's so much uncertainty over what would be allowed, timber sales and forest planning would be disrupted — and there's already a 13 percent shortfall in future timber supplies for Idaho sawmills.
- The regulations won't necessarily improve water quality and could make it worse.

Jones prefers grants remain in present form

BOISE (AP) — A public-private advisory council says it would be a bad idea if the federal government phases out block grants to states for law enforcement, in favor of putting the money directly into federal drug enforcement.

"The war against drug pushers and abusers must be intensified but that can be done on a state and local basis through utilization of the existing block grant program," said Attorney General Jim Jones.

Jones is chairman of the Idaho Criminal Justice Council. On Tuesday, it urged President Reagan and Congress to retain the block grant program which allocates money to law enforcement agencies.

Last month, the Senate Appropriations Committee recommended terminating the block grant program and diverting the money to federal anti-drug efforts.

Jones said state and local law enforcement officers should be in a position to cooperate with federal authorities in drug enforcement. "Termination of the block grant concept in favored of structured federal spending priorities is a step in the wrong direction," he said.

Actors guild joins right-to-work foes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After one of its past presidents endorsed Idaho's controversial right-to-work law, the western division of the Screen Actors Guild has agreed to join state labor leaders in their battle to defeat the ban on compulsory union membership at the polls this fall.

Guild spokesman Mark Locher said Tuesday the move still had to be approved by the union's eastern division board in New York, but the overwhelming vote by the western division members indicated little problem. The vote late Monday was 21-1 with three abstentions.

The board approved a statement in which "The Screen Actors Guild expressed its opposition to the right-to-work referendum in Idaho and offered our support other than financial support," Locher said.

"The board also sanctioned President Patty Duke's appearance in anti-right-to-work public service announcements."

According to union officials, who declined to be identified, the board also discussed a proposal to strip past president Charlton Heston of his so-called Gold Card because of his endorsement of right-to-work in an Idaho television commercial this summer.

But the officials said the move was dropped after questions about its legal ramifications arose. The Gold Card, given to every past president of the Screen Actors Guild, grants the bearer a lifetime membership without paying dues, and the proposal put to the board was intended to require Heston to resume dues payment.

The action by the guild board was requested by Idaho AFL-CIO President Jim Kerns shortly after the Heston pro-right-to-work advertisement appeared. A union official said some board members were concerned that Heston's remarks in the ad implied some alignment with the guild on the right-to-work issue.

Gary Glenn, director of the pro-right-to-work Freedom To Work Committee, denounced the attempt to penalize Heston, claiming that "if they can try to punish Heston for his opinion on this issue, what chance is the little guy in Idaho going to have."

Kerns, who has avoided any suggestion that Heston be penalized for his stand, said he understood the controversy over Heston involved his reported partnership in a nonunion casting company, but guild officials said there has never been any proof of that claim.

The state labor chief said it was unclear whether Duke or a representative of the Screen Actors Guild would be in Coeur d'Alene this weekend, where the Idaho Travel Council has already agreed to hear a pro-right-to-work presentation from two Hollywood producers, Don Galloway and Morgan Paull, who stumped for the law in the state earlier this year.

"At this point I'm not going to ask her to do a commerical," Kerns said. "But as far as a statement of support or if she has time to come up and talk to the Idaho Film Bureau . . . I'd be more than happy. After all, she's the president of an important AFL-CIO union."

Accident injuries claim 4th victim

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A fourth Idaho Falls man has died from injuries sustained in a weekend traffic accident.

Authorities said Rafael Caudillo, 21, died late Monday at an Idaho Falls hospital. He was with three companions early Sunday morning when a pickup truck crashed into them as they walked along the highway near Idaho Falls.

The driver of that truck, Jarrod Hal Clifford, 19, of Idaho Falls, has been charged with drunken driving, and the Bonneville County prosecutor was still reviewing the possibility of filing other charges against him.

Court bars West, group from selling

POCATELLO (AP) — Henry G. West and his company, Western Investment Group of Pocatello, have been permanently enjoined against dealing in securities, state Finance Director Tom D. McEldowney says.

McEldowney said Monday 5th District Judge Ronald Bruce entered final judgment last week against West and his company in a $1 million investment operation involving about 100 Idaho investors.

The state agency started action about 18 months ago, and McEldowney said West cooperated in the investigation and aided in returning money to some investors.

Sixth District judges disqualified themselves and the Idaho Supreme Court appointed Bruce to hear the case, according to Wayne Klein, chief of the finance department's securities bureau.

West and Western Investment Group (WIG), consented to the entry of judgment against them. The defendants admitted sales of unregistered securities and that West and WIG were not licensed to sell securities, McEldowney said.

West and WIG were part of an international investment program offering returns up to 120 percent by investing in international arbitrage, he said.

After the investigation began in 1983, West cooperated with the state and attempted to get refunds of money sent to the foreign companies.

Idaho facing fire cost of $3 million

BOISE (AP) — The state of Idaho faces bills of nearly $3 million from fighting summer forest fires — and an official says it could have been worse.

In fact, Lands Department Deputy Director Don Jones called the rain which fell during a weekend lightning storm in western Idaho "a million dollar rain," because it prevented a new round of forest and range fires.

Jones told the Idaho Land Board on Tuesday that the Lands Department has issued $2.9 million in deficiency warrants, promissary notes that will have to be covered by the next session of the Legislature.

Most of the summer's major range and forest fires in Idaho were caused by an Aug. 10 lightning storm that swept through the area.

Jones said it started 190 fires on state lands and lands protected by the state under cooperative agreements.

Last year the state had 431 fires to battle, but they covered just 798 acres and the bill was $275,000, said Lands Director Stan Hamilton.

This year Jones said the state has battled 528 fires covering 10,492 acres, including about 4,500 acres of forest.

Hamilton said a few bills will be coming in, but the bulk of them have been received.

Jones said there were many lightning strikes from a storm which swept through western Idaho Sunday night and Monday, but the heavy rain which fell at the same time kept them from being serious.

But he said it took "every able-bodied" employee of the agency to fight the fires at the height of the season.

"I wasn't called," said state Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans, who as a member of the Land Board is only indirectly a part of the state agency.

Other board members pressed Evans for a commitment that the next time there's a fire on state lands, he'd volunteer to help fight it.

Evans said he'd make the commitment when "the younger members" of the Land Board would do the same — namely Attorney General Jim Jones, Gov. John Evans and Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa are in their 60s and Auditor Joe Williams is 82.

Potlatch offers to assist workers facing layoff

LEWISTON (AP) — Officials at Potlatch Corp. are offering help finding temporary work to hundreds of employees facing layoffs next spring when the 60-year-old Lewiston mill undergoes a $35 million dollar face lift.

Spokesman Todd Maddock said attempts will be made to find jobs in the construction program for at least some of the up to 500 workers facing eight months off the job when state-of-the-art technology is brought into the mill starting in April.

The construction project should mean the labor force at the mill will be cut to 60 percent of its current level, Maddock said, but the other workers will be given jobs at the dormant Clearwater Plywood Plant that will begin two shifts of operation in the fall of 1987.

"We don't anticipate much change in employee levels," Maddock said. "They jobs they have after the mill starts will be a lot more secure than the ones they have now."

Local officials believe there will be some adverse impact on the local economy when the layoffs take place, but they do not think the fall out will be as drastic as it was last year when Potlatch announced it would indefinitely layoff 1,200 workers unless wage concessions were approved.

"Last time, it was all of a sudden, a shock," said labor market analyst Doug Tweedy, but now, "There's an alternative, something to look forward to because employment levels should come back."

Last year's confrontation saw retail sales in wage levels in the area drop dramatically, but only 200 people were actually laid off before workers agreed to the reductions.

Payment ends state land claim

BOISE (AP) — The state of Idaho will be getting $120,000 from the corporation which operates the Coeur d'Alene Resort to relinquish any claim to land under the $60 million resort.

After an executive session Tuesday, members of the Idaho Land Board voted to accept $120,000 for public school endowment funds, and surrender any possible right to the land.

The Hagadone Hospitality Corp. has built a major northern Idaho resort at Lake Coeur d'Alene. It's partially on land which once was part of the lake bed.

Attorney General Jim Jones said the state has been exploring whether it might have a claim to land under the resort, since the state owns the beds of navigable water in Idaho.

Jones said research indicates the shoreline area was filled in about 1910 by the Milwaukee Railroad Co. That was legal at the time, but an Idaho Supreme Court decision in 1918 upheld the state's claim to the beds of navigable waters, he said.

"The state probably had a solid interest in the land in 1910," said Jones. "But each year thereafter it has become a little less solid."

Jones said the Land Board has been negotiating for months, and members agreed Tuesday to drop all claims in return for the $120,000 payment.

Leroy backs imposition of wood duty

BOISE (AP) — Comparing the Canadian government's request in asking the Reagan Administration to delay the imposition of countervailing duties on soft wood to that of a motorist who just hit a pedestrian and now wants to back up the car, Lt. Gov. David Leroy said he hopes the U.S. Commerce Department will deny the favor.

"The recent disclosures of Canadian cost miscalculations and the admission by Provincial Forests Minister Jack Kempf that their government's returns on timber have not been adequate only further strengthens and proves our claim of relevant unfair trading practices," said Leroy Monday. "We should stand firm for competitive trade."

Leroy's call for countervailing duties parallels his Democratic opponent for governor, Cecil Andrus, who called for similar measures in Coeur d'Alene Sunday.

If Canada changes its current pricing levels toward the United States, then the matter can be reviewed by the federal government, said Leroy. But if the U.S. embarks on the imposition of duties by the Oct. 9 deadline, it will only strengthen Idaho's employment picture and encourage Canada to ensure a fair timber trade again, he said.

La Rocco enlists help of actor pal

BOISE (AP) — State Senate candidate Larry La Rocco of Boise will get some help from "Hill Street Blues" in his campaign against Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, for the District 21 seat.

Joe Spano, who plays Detective Henry Goldblume on the Thursday night program, will be in Boise on Saturday to campaign for La Rocco. Both men attended Riordan High School in San Francisco, graduating in 1963.

Spano will attend a barbeque fund raiser at La Rocco's home, with the cost of $50 per person.

Spano was nominated in 1983 for an Emmy as supporting actor for his portrayal of Goldblume.

Western accepts Delta's offer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Western Airlines Inc., the subject of repeated takeover rumors in recent months, said Tuesday it agreed to be acquired by Delta Air Lines Inc. for $860 million.

It was the fourth giant airline merger announced over the past year and came against a background of intense competition in the deregulated air-travel industry, which has compelled large carriers to expand or risk losing business.

Los Angeles-based Western said its directors accepted an offer of $12.50 a share, half in cash and half in securities, from Atlanta-based Delta, which long has been rumored to be seeking another airline to strengthen its operations in the western United States.

Analysts estimated the value of the offer at about $860 million, based on Western's 51.2 million common shares outstanding and more than 14 million convertible preferred shares and stock options.

After the announcement, Western's common stock jumped $1.50 a share to $11.67½ in New York Stock Exchange composite trading, while Delta's stock closed unchanged at $42.12½.

Delta and Western said their definitive merger agreement was subject to approval by both companies' stockholders and the Department of Transportation.

Delta operates 254 aircraft to 96 U.S. and foreign destinations, and its domestic routes are concentrated in the eastern United States. Western operates 89 jets to 67 airports, principally in the western United States, Canada and Mexico.

The newly merged company would become one of the nation's largest air carriers, along with United, American and Texas Air, which owns Continental and which has agreed to buy Eastern Airlines.

The route systems of Delta and Western "fit together ideally," Delta Chairman David C. Garrett said in a statement. "The combined companies will be able to offer expanded and improved service to every section of the country and will have the size and resources necessary to compete effectively with any other airline in the deregulated environment."

In the same statement, Western Chairman Gerald Grinstein said the proposed merger "represents an ideal culmination of all of our efforts in recent years," and that it would "deliver meaningful value to our shareholders and provide to our employees the job security and stability they so richly deserve."

Western, a 60-year-old airline that lost $400 million from 1980 to 1984, made what industry analysts consider a spectacular comeback because of worker concessions, and earned a record $67.1 million last year.

Western has relatively little debt and holds valuable properties at the airports of Salt Lake City and Los Angeles, the airline's two major hubs, or connecting centers.

But Western has felt the impact of continued fare wars in the industry. In this year's second quarter, Western, citing price discounting, lost $13 million against a year-earlier profit of $31.7 million.

Delta, widely considered one of the most consistently profitable airlines, carried its first passenger in 1929. It earned $259.4 million in its fiscal year ended June 30, 1985.

Analysts have long speculated that Delta would have to expand by acquiring another carrier. The speculation intensified aftr its major rival, Eastern Airlines, agreed last February to be acquired by Texas Air Corp. for $676 million. That merger has not yet received government approval.

Other mergers announced over the past year include Northwest Airlines' purchase of Republic Airlines for $884 million, and Trans World Airlines' purchase of Ozark Air Lines for $250 million.

Stocks downhill for 3rd day

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market had a third straight losing session Tuesday after a strong tone at the opening soured.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 4.50 to 1,884.14. Buyers at first rallied to the blue chips and the Dow Jones industrial average spurted more than 12 points during the morning on Wall Street.

But the buyers lost interest and the blue chip indicator pulled back as it has each session since last Thursday when it reached a record closing high of 1,919.71.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange shrank to 137.52 million shares from 153.30 million Monday.

CBS board convenes today

NEW YORK (AP) — The board of directors of CBS Inc. meets today against a background of speculation that the company might change hands and that Chairman Thomas Wyman might lose his job.

On Monday, CBS denied it approached Philip Morris Cos. and Westinghouse Electric Corp. about purchasing CBS, but the company declined to comment on a report that it had been searching for potential suitors.

Newsweek reported in this week's issue that CBS had been seeking unsuccessfully for possible bidders in case Laurence Tisch, chairman of the conglomerate Loews Corp., tried to win control of CBS without paying "full price."

Tisch, a CBS board member who holds a 24.9 percent stake in the company, paid an average $127 a share for CBS stock on the open market, while financial analysts say the stock is worth $170 a share, Newsweek said.

Busy cook takes time to prepare sugarless desserts

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Now that Colleen Brown's five children are out of the nest, she is working away from home for the first time.

She said she likes to cook, but has had less time for it since she began selling real estate. She has managed to keep up with her bread baking, and hasn't had to buy a loaf yet, however.

And when Brown's children, their spouses and the 10 grandchildren come for a visit, she makes sugar-free desserts for them. One of her daughters, Shelley Zimmerman, has hypoglycemia (low blood sugar), which makes it necessary for her to cut down on sugar.

Because of Brown's work, there are times when there must be hurry-up meals to fix. For these occasions, she sometimes prepares large casseroles, which she divides and puts into freezer bags, to be popped into the microwave on short notice.

The combination range in her kitchen cuts down on cooking time for everything. "You can just microwave in it," she said, "or just bake in it, or you can do both at the same time.

"You can put in a meat dish and a potato dish or casserole and a cake or some other dessert. You can put all of them in at the same time, turn on both units — the oven and the microwave — and in 20 minutes, the whole meal is done just to perfection."

Both she and her husband, Devoe, have recently obtained real estate licenses. For the past two months, Colleen has been working almost full-time for a real estate office, and Devoe is selling part-time in addition to his work as a home builder.

"It's something we want to work into, where we're both working at it together," she said.

Brown has taken up golf and roller skating in recent years. She said these are fun, but do not provide the feeling of accomplishment she had when her children were at home. Helping people find what they are looking for in a home fills this gap.

"I love it," she said, "I really do enjoy it. I like being in the public and meeting people."

One of Shelley's sisters, Rhonda Nelson, came up with the following recipe for sugarless ice cream:

SUGAR-FREE ICE CREAM

Prepare 2 small packages vanilla sugar-free pudding according to package directions. Use the kind that must be cooked. Cool. Add 2 or 3 cups frozen or fresh sliced peaches or other fruits, 3 cups plain yogurt and 4 cups milk. Freeze in an ice cream freezer.

"We had a family reunion about three weeks ago, and we made four freezers full of it. It really went over big. We had 50-some people there," she said.

The following cookie recipe, Brown said she made up for her daughter "so she could have desserts along with the rest of us."

NO SUGAR COOKIES

Simmer until just soft:
¾ cup water
½ cup chopped dates
½ cup chopped raisins

Add:
⅔ cup shortening or margarine
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup white or whole wheat flour
3 cups oatmeal
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt

Drop onto greased cookie sheet and bake 10-12 minutes at 350 degrees.

Brown said, although layered deserts are pretty common, this recipe is for one that is sugar-free.

SUGAR-FREE LAYERED DESSERT

1½ cups flour
¾ cup margarine
¾ cup chopped nuts

Mix and pack into the bottom of an ungreased 9x13 inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Cool and spread with two 8-ounce packages of softened cream cheese, beaten with 3 envelopes of Equal sweetener.

Mix 1 large package sugar-free instant pudding — any flavor. Spread on top of cheese mixture.

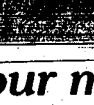

Top with 1 packet of Dream Whip no sugar Desserta. Add another ½ cup chopped nuts on top of that.

Another variation would be to use, instead of the pudding, 1 large package of sugar-free raspberry or strawberry jello, along with the added fruit.

Last year, she and her daughter Shelley tried canning peaches and pears, using unsweetened apple juice, instead of syrup, adding only 1 teaspoon of sugar to each quart, as a precaution to help the fruit hold up.

"I still have them on the shelf. The color hasn't changed. They are still just really good. And one teaspoon, out of a whole quart of fruit, didn't seem to have an effect on Shelley's problem. That really is a good way to do it," she said.

Changing your mind can be more hassle than it's worth

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

Don't change your mind in the middle of a trip, especially if you're flying. Don't even think about doing it.

I guess over the last few years the airlines have gotten fed up with no-shows and decided to crack down. You can cancel, but generally you're only going to get half your money back.

We decided to see if we could get an earlier flight home the other day after attending a food show in San Francisco.

The experience was confusing and frustrating at the least.

The first person I talked to said there would be a charge of $24. Friend husband and I discussed this and decided that we needed the time to work at home, so we would do it.

I called back and the next person I talked to said it would be $56.40 per person or $116.80 (and our names were being entered into the computer because of our request).

Now, we didn't know if we needed to work THAT much, so I called back and got the third person.

This one said both previous ones were wrong and we should take the second offer because it was a bargain and they would stand on it, although they should charge more.

We pleaded that we were members in their frequent-flyer program and had cards to their wait-over rooms and they had left us stranded late at night last month. They said take it or leave it. So we took it.

When we finally got to the head of the long, long line at the airport to change our tickets, yep, they charged us $24!

I came home with a big bag of samples including a jar of wild rice pancake mix (good), the premium Chinese dieter's tea, almonds, raisins, whole white peppercorns — you know, the things that are not an integral part of our diet.

Want some Tiger Balm ointment? Old Rome Italian Barbecue sauce? Chee Seng sesame oil? Tiny kernels of popping corn? How about deep fried alligator meat tidbits for your next party? These were just a few of the exotics available at the show.

I did find one great recipe that you might like to try. You should have almost everything in your garden (or your neighbors) for it right now.

CREAM OF BASIL SOUP

2 cups of zucchini, shredded
½ cup onion, chopped
½ teaspoon granulated sugar
2 tablespoons butter
½ red bell pepper, seeded and diced
¼ cup prosciutto ham, chopped (check your deli for this or use any ham you might have)
1 cup rich chicken stock
1 tablespoon cornstarch (optional)
2 cups half-and-half
Salt and white pepper to taste
1 cup fresh basil, finely chopped

In a saucepan, saute the zucchini, onion and sugar in the butter. Add the bell pepper and ham and saute briefly. Now add the chicken stock and heat, stirring constantly.

Take this mixture by cupfuls and whirl briefly in a blender or food processor, then put back into the saucepan.

Add the half-and-half and slowly heat to a near boil. Sprinkle on the basil and whisk it and seasonings in just before serving. Add the cornstarch only if it seems to need more body.

This serves 4 and can be doubled.

We really dined well on the trip. It would be hard to miss in San Francisco. I did notice that our hotel, like so many nowadays is becoming more and more health conscious.

One breakfast that was featured as being under 300 calories and low in fat, cholesterol, sugar and sodium was downright good and very filling.

It had juice; a bowl of cereal and fruit and low-fat milk; a carrot and raisin muffin served with apple butter; plus coffee or tea.

This breakfast was served especially nicely so the diner didn't feel like a forgotten stepchild. I think that is one of the secrets of eating on a diet. Treat yourself as a guest with nice dishes, and take time to eat leisurely.

Enjoy!

In Wisconsin, a barbecue mean it's bratwurst time

By PEGGY KATALINICH
Newsday

SHEBOYGAN, Wis. — Starting every Memorial Day, a dark cloud settles over Wisconsin: the smoke from brats frying on the grills across the land. When the barbecue season arrives in Wisconsin, the barbecue and bratwurst come out. Particularly in Sheboygan, the self-proclaimed bratwurst capital of the world, every summer event, from graduation parties and family reunions to church festivals is celebrated with a fry-out.

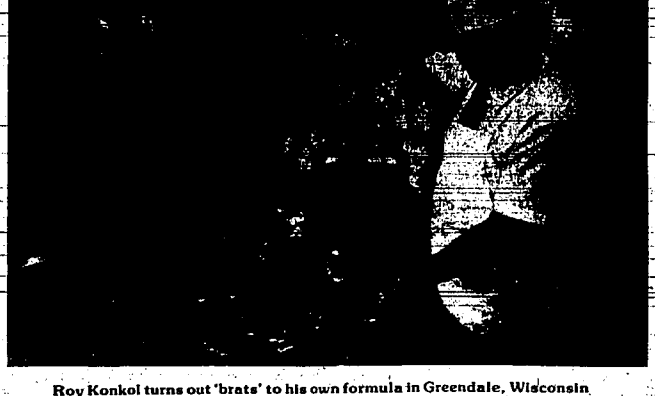

They take their brats seriously here. Ritual calls for raw onions, relish, ketchup, mustard and sauerkraut on top of a slowly grilled bratwurst served in a zemmel, the town's hard roll. Don't ever consider mushy hot dog or hamburger buns. Grown-ups have two brats per roll; only wimps and children have a single.

After 16 years at a McDonald's, Roger Gosse opened a little brat stand so he could serve sandwiches the way he liked them: with lots of butter on the bun. Gosse explained the way to a perfect brat: "I think a slow fire has a lot to do with it. You don't want to fry a brat quick like a hamburger." He cooks the brats for about 45 minutes in the early morning; that gets them 80 percent done, so he just has to finish them when the orders pour in. By 11:15 a.m. each day, he has a full house. "I think every local brat is a quality product," he said, "but Johnsonville (brats) seemed to shrink less."

The bratwurst business has been very good to the descendents of Ralph and Alice Stayer and Alois and Carl Hirsch, who took a small butcher shop in Johnsonville just outside Sheboygan and built it into a national force. They even made inroads into the highly competitive sausage market of Milwaukee. The recipe for success is a family secret, the process is a secret. In fact, everything about the plant is a secret except the conference room. What they tell you, while sitting in the conference room, is that the meat in other brats traditionally has been chopped fine, but Johnsonville brats are coarsely chopped. They will also admit that they have their own slaughterhouse and buy hogs on the open market. Garlic? They just smile? Onion? More smiles.

"Across the state in Cuba City, the four Weber brothers also are turning out bratwurst, along with a case full of other sausages, hams and bacon. Grandfather came from Switzerland; the plant is now run by the third-generation Webers, and the fourth generation is starting to get its hands into the sausage mixtures. Again, no secrets were

Scanners let shoppers track their purchases

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

In a recent column, I described the U-Scan terminals that were installed a year ago at Ream's Superstore in American Fork, Utah.

These scanners let shoppers scan the Universal Product Code symbols on their own purchases. As the shoppers scanned, they could keep track of their purchases, and the amount they were spending appeared on the screen in front of them.

Once they had finished scanning, they could move on to a cashier, who would have their receipt ready and could deduct the value of their coupons. The owners of Ream's were surprised at how many of the store's customers — even those with large orders — seemed pleased with do-it-yourself scanning.

At the end of the column, I asked readers what they thought of the idea.

Supermarket Shopper

Gladys DeBerry of Nags Head, N.C., wrote: "I think the scanning idea sounds great. Because I have more time than money, I would gladly ring up my own purchases. That way I could make sure there were no errors."

"I think do-it-yourself scanning is a unique and ingenious idea," said Pat Bridger of Beatrice, Neb. "We have two large bag-it-yourself stores in our town, and they do very well. So I think people would try scanning their own purchases, especially if a small discount were offered."

Mrs. Stephen Collier of Ft. Wayne, Ind., thinks do-it-yourself scanning might help her get out of the supermarket faster. "I think it's a wonderful idea, and I would certainly use the do-it-yourself scanner. I get very impatient when it takes me longer to go through the checkout with a week's groceries than it does to go through the aisles and put the same groceries in my basket."

"Please let my local store know about this wonderful idea," wrote Linda Hastings of Bradford, Mass. "I think it is a great idea, ... but please continue to have baggers at the end of the line."

Shirley Hall of Ithaca, N.Y., gave a pressing reason for her interest in the system: "I would certainly welcome a scan-it-yourself system. Last week, a cashier charged me 89 cents for one tomato and then proceeded to pack it under 10 pounds of canned goods!"

But even though regular checkout counters are available at the Ream's store in Utah, many of the letters I received had a negative response to the idea of do-it-yourself scanning.

Carol Phipps of Modesto, Calif., was concerned that the system will cost some of the cashiers their jobs. "I will be happy to forfeit my 1 percent U-Scan savings to save a few grocery checkers their jobs."

"It would be like going to the beauty shop, doing my hair myself and then being charged as though an operator had done my hair," says Mrs. P.M. Peat of Houston. Peat also asked how the system would affect her fellow shoppers. "What about the elderly and others who can get around the store but don't have the arm power or energy to scan their own groceries?"

That's a good question. In a future column I will answer it and the other questions raised by readers who were uncertain about do-it-yourself scanning.

Brats

revealed, but Reginald Weber did talk about pride in their quality, from the small slaughterhouse, where they kill all the cattle and hogs they use, to the real hickory chips they use for smoking.

The formula for bratwurst, Weber said, depends on the locality. "Here, there are a lot of English and Germans; they are looking for a mild flavor. You go north fifty to 75 miles and they want a heavy type, more sagey. Everybody has their own recipe. Brats are not as spicy, for instance, as Polish sausage."

If there's a lot of interest in sausages in Wisconsin (just look at the space devoted to them in the meat cases), there is also a lot of confusion about the names and styles. Polish sausage to one butcher is spicy, to another mild; kransky by any other name is still Slovenian sausage; or maybe Hungarian. Each butcher — and the state is still full of the old-fashioned types — interprets according to his own liking. Harold Becker, for instance, and a crew of 30 are turning out nearly a dozen different sausages at Luedke's supermarket in Sheboygan. "Herman and Max (the founders) always told us, 'If you don't want to eat it, don't make it,'" said Becker. He still uses their German recipes and makes home-smoked bacon and hams for Christmas, 11 tons' worth.

If you would like a taste of Wisconsin, pick up some bratwurst, American potato salad (with mayonnaise) and German potato salad (with bacon and vinegar), and some baked beans and cole slaw for a proper brat fry. In Sheboygan, a brat with all the trimmings is followed up with a hamburger. Roger Gosse, above, opened his stand so he could serve brats his own way.

Brats 'n' Beer

8 to 10 bratwursts
2 (12-ounce) bottles Wisconsin beer
1 large Bermuda onion, sliced
4 tablespoons butter
8 hard rolls

Prepare grill (pre-heat gas grill to medium-hot; let red-hot briquets die off slightly to medium-hot). Place brats on grill and cook, turning frequently, about 30 minutes. If they're cooking too quickly, turn down heat or disperse coals so the brats cook more slowly. If there is room on the grill, place beer in a saucepan, along with onion and butter and heat on grill. When brats are cooked, place in beer and let stand at least 5 minutes. They can be kept this way up to 30 minutes. Serve on hard rolls with the works: onions, ketchup, mustard, relish, sauerkraut. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

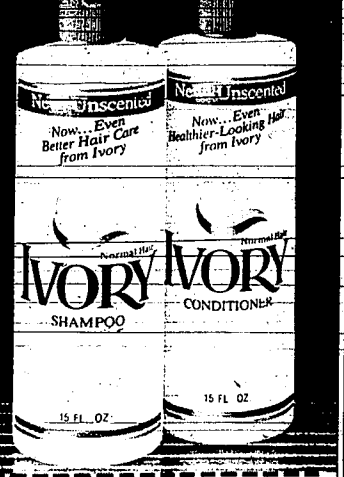

German Potato Salad

3 pounds potatoes
salt and pepper
½ pound bacon
2 teaspoons flour
½ cup white vinegar
½ cup water
a scant ½ cup sugar
1 bunch green onions

Boil unpeeled potatoes until very tender. Let cool, then peel. Cut in half lengthwise, then in slices about ½-inch wide. Season generously with salt and pepper. Cook bacon over medium-low heat until fat is rendered and bacon is crisp. Drain bacon on paper towels, reserving fat. Stir flour into fat and cook a minute or two. Add vinegar, water, sugar and onions, and cook until slightly thickened, about 5 minutes. Let cool slightly, then pour over potatoes. Add crumbled bacon to taste. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Protect those plants from an early frost

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

A light frost can damage or kill tender flowers and vegetables almost any time after the first of September.

Even though we usually have frost-free weather in most areas for a while longer, the danger becomes greater with every passing day.

If we do get an early frost, it is usually followed by two or three weeks of good growing weather which would ripen tomatoes and other tender vegetables. But once the fruit or flowers are damaged, they do not recover.

Many people feel it is too much work to protect a whole flower bed or vegetable garden from frost. However, it may be rather easy to protect a few of the most tender plants.

You may want to protect the one or two tomato or pepper plants with the largest amount of immature fruit. Cantaloupe, watermelon and squash are other candidates for frost protection.

The first frost, if it is a light one, may not damage all fruit. The canopy of leaves can be some protection. Undamaged fruit can still be picked after the frost. Corn ears will often continue to ripen even after frost has turned many of the leaves brown.

The most tender flowers are zinnia, ageratum, dahlia, begonia and impatiens. One or two degrees below freezing will often damage them. Marigolds will withstand up to four or five degrees below freezing. Petunias, snapdragons, alyssum and pansies will often withstand 10 or more degrees of frost.

There are certain weather conditions which indicate possible frost. It is most likely to occur following a cool, rainy or cloudy period.

Even though it is cooler during the daytime, the clouds hold warm air down and keep it from mixing with upper cold air. As soon as the sky clears, heat radiates from plants and other objects to the sky. Even an overhanging roof eve or porch can help protect from this radiation frost. Often there are two or three frosty nights in a row and then it warms up again.

The best material for protecting from frost is an insulating material such as a blanket. Heat can radiate from clear plastic materials. Plants which have been well irrigated are less susceptible to light frost.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Give flowers the freeze treatment

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

The Dutch call them Eskimo or Ice tulips.

The production technique is called "freezing-in." The result is more cut flowers for a longer season and the bulbs do better further south than generally.

Dr. August DeHertogh, head of Horticultural Services at North Carolina State University, a leading bulb flower researcher, said the basic principle for the cold treatment needed by tulip bulbs is simple — "a modification of standard forcing."

"The basic difference is that after the bulbs are fully rooted at 48 degrees F the plants are held for 7-10 months at 26-28 degrees F. Thus winter is prolonged and spring is delayed until fall. Therefore, the major requirement of this forcing technique is the availability of a temperature controlled freezer."

DeHertogh notes that normally most spring-flowering bulbs need about 15 weeks of temperatures between 35 and 48 degrees F, but some varieties do well with 12 to 20 weeks. He also explained:

"This is why some bulbs and cultivars do better in one climate area or another. Of course, very low temperatures are another factor. Some bulbs when planted properly are more hardy than others. For example, most tulips are hardy but Dutch iris are not."

"Now, as far as the gardener using a dry cool treatment (pre-cooling) before preplanting, this is advised only for selected tulip cultivars...for the deep South (Climactic Zone 9 and sometimes 8). For zones 3 to 7, they should just be planted in the fall when the soil temperatures drop below 60 degrees F. This is September in zones 3 and 4 and November for 7 and 8."

Generally only tulips are used for ice treatment and this is done only by commercial forces who can maintain the 26-28 degrees F. In Holland they hold a limited amount of hyacinths, daffodils and muscaris for this purpose. If tulips are to be forced using the ice technique, cultivar selection is highly important.

The average forcing time for Eskimo tulips is about 14 to 18 days, with heavy fertilization.

Home gardeners in the deep South may buy pre-cooled bulbs for planting in November, but they will have to dig up and pre-cool the bulbs before the next season's planting. Dutch growers and exporters give bulbs the cold treatment in storage facilities and ship them to the florist trade in volume at the right time for planting or forcing. They are made to root, develop little sprouts and kept in cold storage until the time for shipment to warm areas in insulated containers.

Multi Head Blooms

Last year I planted varieties of tulips and daffodils with multiflowered heads that added delightful color to the garden.

Winter can spring thoughts about bulbs

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Apparently winter is settling in. Winter is that long season in which you have to put a sheet or even a blanket over you in bed.

But it is not altogether a season of gloom. It begins (now) with thinking about spring bulbs that are planted from September to Thanksgiving, with preference given to October except for tulips, which go in on Nov. 12. I like to give a specific date, otherwise you may dawdle.

Garden shops are or soon will be full of bulbs, a far greater assortment than gardeners were used to in the old days. The color pictures attached to the bins of bulbs are quite accurate; the blooms will indeed look like that, only more beautiful.

The first dollar should always be spent on daffodils, I think, as they give a greater show early in the year (starting about St. Patrick's Day) and last longer than most other things. If you give them reasonable care they will go on indefinitely, barring a siege of basal rot, nematodes or — but let's not start on all that.

Daffodils fall into three categories. Those used for bold clumps in front of hollies, azaleas and other shrubs; those planted in rows back among the turnips, just for cutting for the house; and those that are grown for their incredible beauty as individual flowers.

There is no law about the way to use daffodils. Where there is space, they look best to me in clumps of one variety, then another variety. But in a small garden they are quite wonderful in a bed of varieties all mixed up, one bulb of each kind.

The city gardener should not miss the early daffodils that start blooming with me about March 10 to March 16. This is a few days before the other early-midseason kinds come out. Fortunately the stores always have 'February Gold,' which will usually provide color for at least three weeks, sometimes five weeks.

Equally useful and pretty is 'Peeping Tom,' both of these on 12-inch stems, and with them 'Tete a Tete,' a small yellow, is pretty though it does not last in the sometimes cruel spring weather as long as the other two.

Three widely available daffodils for late in the season — kinds I think anybody would like — are the lovely poet variety, "Actaea," which in a great year can produce show-winning blooms but is usually too irregular for a show flower, but very lovely all the same with its red eye and nice scent; the two-or three-flowered (on one stem) white nodding "Thalia," also fragrant, and very lovely once the clump has thickened up and it is rather starved, otherwise it lacks grace; and "Cheerfulness," a scented variety with white (touched with yellow) pompons of flower, several to the stem. All three are virtually indestructible.

In between are the hundreds of midseason kinds. Take your choice. You should know, however, that the most beautiful daffodils are grown by specialists and there is neither the supply nor the demand to get them in the average garden center; the bulbs of which usually come from the great wholesale growers of Holland.

But if the gardener has mental energy enough to want to take up daffodils as a passionate hobby he should join a daffodil society, write for specialists' catalogues and order his bulbs in spring for the following fall. Still, I have noticed at our daffodil shows in the spring that some of the loveliest daffodils do not rate well with many visitors, the preference often being for gross size and gaudy color (red against yellow) no matter how heavy and overbalanced the trumpet is, and no matter how coarse the texture is. For general display in the garden however, the cheapest and toughest kinds do as well as any others, since at a few feet's distance they all look much alike.

I would certainly want some snowdrops, the common Galanthus nivalis. These do not bloom as early with me as I think they should. I growl at them every year. But they come along in late February, and considering their little nodding white blooms almost hug the ground it is surprising how exciting they are to see.

There should also be some crocuses, preferably by the tens of thousand, but even a clump of six will seem rewarding enough on a late winter day. Especially reliable for early bloom, usually in January and often under the ice, is Crocus selberi, lavender with sunny throat.

There are many other wild kinds and a range of hybrids from the wild Crocus chrysanthus — these come in white, blue, cream, yellow, burnished gold, and some of them have alternating petals of different color. As years pass, they seed and get moved about perhaps by squirrels, so your neat clumps of distinct kinds tend to get mixed up.

The large-so-called-Dutch crocuses are less graceful, simply because they are larger and showier. Some of them seed about. A white seedling of 'Joan of Arc,' which looks just like its parent, has a way of popping up where I never planted it. These are all tremendously cheerful and should be planted where you see them coming and going, preferably with a southern exposure to encourage early bloom.

I have only one clump of Scilla tubergeniana, which is sort of blue and sort of milky white. Its blooms appear at ground level and over a space of 10 days or so they rise up. They are fully agreeable in a modest way and I would not be without them.

But for those with a taste for atom bombs in the garden, the eye-blinking saturated blue of the small Scilla sibirica is recommended. It blooms with such daffodils as "Peeping Tom," and will almost satisfy those who can never find enough blue.

Are you still using ordinary towels in your microwave?
How unnatural.

Bet you think all paper towels are pretty much alike, huh? Well, guess again. Bounty Microwave is different. Because it's the first towel designed to come in contact with food during microwave cooking.

What makes it different? For one thing, it's made from natural fibers. And there are NO artificial dyes. So even though you can't see the difference between Bounty Microwave and those run-of-the-mill towels, it's there.

So the next time you get ready to heat the kids' pizza in the microwave, stop and think. Then do what comes naturally, and reach for the Bounty Microwave.

Bounty Microwave.
A natural for cooking.

You're either engaged or you're not

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Recently, several young girls I work with have come to work wearing rings with tiny diamonds — they call them "pre-enagement rings."

Abby, just what is a "pre-engagement ring?" Rather than risk hurting their feelings, I thought I'd ask you. Does this mean she's a "pre-bride?"

Or does it mean she's a "post-virgin?" Or is it a precommitment on the boy's part? (Meaning, "I'll marry you, if no one better comes along.") I would feel insulted to receive a "pre-engagement ring."

You're either engaged, or you're not. If you're engaged, call it an "engagement ring." If you're not, call it a "friendship ring."

— TOO OLD TO UNDERSTAND

DEAR TOO OLD: What you (or I) perceive the ring to mean is unimportant. Its meaning to the giver and receiver is all that matters.

Obviously it signifies some degree of special commitment. Don't concern yourself with the size of the diamond, or the question of virginity; just wish the ring-bearer well and pull in your claws.

DEAR ABBY: I have noticed several letters in your column lately containing valuable tips on how to keep small children safe from death traps.

Who ever would have dreamed that a toddler could wander off during a family outing and lose his life by climbing into an ice chest containing just enough melted ice to drown in! Or that a child could slip down in his high chair and strangle to death by catching his throat on the tray!

I have another tragic story to tell that may save the lives of other children. About 20 years ago my aunt put her twin boys in their playpen because she had a lot of work to do. They were about 14 months old at the time.

When she returned about half an hour later to check on them, she found one of the twins dead! She had thoughtlessly placed the playpen near a window where the child could reach the cord from the blinds. He was probably playing with the cord, became entangled in it, and hung himself.

— VIRGINIA READER

DEAR READER: Thank you for alerting my readers to a danger that may not have occurred to them. You may have saved a life today.

DEAR ABBY: Is honesty really the best policy? Before I married my husband, I confessed that I had had sex with a steady boyfriend. I thought I loved him and we had gone together for two years. Well, we broke up and drifted apart, but he was the only one.

I thought I was doing the right thing by being honest with my fiance, but was I ever wrong! Now every time we have an argument, he throws it up to me and calls me every vile name in the book.

I never asked him about what he did before he married me, but I have heard from some of his longtime friends that he had sex with just about every girl he ever went with, and there were dozens.

Being honest just got me into a lot of trouble. So I guess I can answer my own question. Is honesty really the best policy? The answer is no, right?

— ME IN THE BRONX, N.Y.

DEAR ME: Wrong! In my opinion, honesty is still the best policy. Where is it written that one must answer every question that is asked? It's a person's privilege to say, "Please don't ask me any personal questions and I won't ask you any." Then live by it.

Letters of thanks

Club's first garden tour raised plenty of funds

On behalf of the Junior Club of Twin Falls, I would like to thank all those who helped make our first garden tour such a success.

A special thanks goes out to the Brumbachs, Brizees, Doerrs, Warnicks and Sandes for letting us in their beautiful yards, and to Kelley Garden Center for all their help in the planning of the tour.

We are thrilled to know that all the money raised (almost $1,500) can now help some abused and neglected children through the Guardian Ad Litem program. Thanks again to you all.

Castleford's donations to hotline appreciated

Thanks to the Castleford Methodist Church, the Castleford Baptist Church and the people of Castleford for the generous donations they made to the Southern Idaho Family Farm Hotline. This donation to the hotline was made at an ice cream social sponsored by the churches and supported by the community.

Since the day-to-day operations of the hotline are funded totally by donations, we really appreciate Castleford's effort.

Thank you also to other individuals and businesses which have supported the hotline volunteer effort to help farm families in distress.

New resident receives cooperation with move

We returned to Idaho after three years to settle in Twin Falls. Yesterday we moved a mobile home into Cameo Mobile Estates, and I have spent a good part of the morning on the phone getting things lined up to move in.

I must commend the help who work in this valley, Idaho Power, the city, and Mr. Landam, First Security, a lovely lady at King Video who helped me Sunday trying to locate a special channel on a set, the operator at Ma Bell.

I have had nothing but courtesy, friendly, helpful employees, and when I shop in the stores downtown people take time to visit and be of help.

Keep it up Twin Falls, and hang in there through the bad times. You have a great deal to offer those who move here and are not familiar with the area.

A word also for Bob and Rosella at Cameo who have patiently held a space for us with a small deposit. We know we will enjoy living there.

"Decadent," warned the reader who submitted this recipe. "Who cares!" we said after sampling these rich cookie bars.

Try a sky-high mocha pie for a tasty dessert

From Better Homes and Gardens

Caught empty-handed at dessert time? Not if you have this elegant ice-cream pie in your freezer. You can store it for up to three months.

Remove the pie from the freezer about 10 minutes before serving. Then rinse a kitchen towel in very hot water and wring it well. Rub the towel over the outside of the pie plate and let the plate sit for a few minutes. This softens the shortening in the crust, making it less likely to stick to the pie plate when you cut and serve.

SKY-HIGH MOCHA PIE

⅓ cup finely chopped walnuts
¼ cup packed brown sugar
1 ounce unsweetened chocolate, grated
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint coffee ice cream, softened
1 pint chocolate ice cream, softened
1 cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
2 teaspoons instant coffee crystals

Combine pie crust mix, nuts, brown sugar and chocolate. Combine water and vanilla; add to piecrust mixture, a little at a time, tossing with a fork until mixture forms a ball. On a floured surface roll pastry to a 12-inch circle; transfer to 9-inch pie plate. Trim edges. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 20 minutes. Cool; chill.

Spread coffee ice cream in crust. Freeze. Spread chocolate ice cream on top of coffee layer. Freeze. Combine whipping cream, powdered sugar and coffee crystals; beat to soft peaks. Spread on top of ice cream. Freeze firm. Makes 8 servings.

Bake these nutties in your waffle baker. They're fun to eat because they're crisp and bumpy.

WAVY WAFFLE COOKIES

Cooking oil
¼ cup butter or margarine
1-3rd cup packed brown sugar
1 egg
2 tablespoons milk
2-3rds cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
1-3rd cup chopped peanuts or pecans
½ cup sifted powdered sugar
2 to 3 teaspoons milk

Using a pastry brush, brush grids of waffle baker with oil. Preheat baker on medium setting. In a small mixer bowl beat butter for 30 seconds. Add sugar; beat until fluffy. Add egg and milk; beat well. Combine flour and baking powder; add to butter mixture, beating until well mixed. Stir in peanuts.

Drop by rounded teaspoons 2 inches apart onto hot waffle baker. Close lid; bake 2 minutes. Using a fork, lift cookies to a wire rack. Cool. Combine powdered sugar, vanilla and milk until mixture is of a drizzling consistency. Drizzle over cookies. Store in a covered container. Makes 20.

Author calls criticism the San Andreas of feminine faults

By COSMOPOLITAN

Some feminists are quick to criticize men, but all women are not perfect, either — and one of their worst faults is the way they disparage each other.

Women tend to be hard on their own sex, Lyn Tornabene wrote in the September issue of Cosmopolitan, and she called it the San Andreas of feminine faults.

She noted that some of the most outspoken and successful opponents of women's rights have been women. Women have supported legislators who voted against ratifying the Equal Rights Amendment, women are in the front ranks of fighters against legal abortion and women support politicians who are male chauvinists.

She deplored the attitude of women who say they would never work for a woman or who, in a mixed group, side with men against another woman under attack. She offered women these test questions about women's attitudes toward women:

— Would you fly on the Concorde if the pilot and copilot were women?

— Will you vote for a female presidential candidate?

— Would you choose a female surgeon to remove your brain tumor?

— Do you want your daughter to join the Chicago Bears?

While women should not be too hard on each other, Tornabene said, there still are a list of easily correctable minor faults that are primarily female and give the sex a bad name.

— Haute slavery. When somebody out there says big shoulders are in, women go around padded like the Chicago Bears. They worry about whether to iron or discard their hair ribbons. Their clothes have initials as if they belonged to somebody else.

— World-class critic. That's the woman for whom nothing is ever just right. She can't go out to lunch because it is too cold; she can't play tennis because it is too hot. At your favorite bistro she will find a noodle in her bouillon, a wrong spice in her curry, too much chocolate in her mocha frappe — and send each one back.

— Miss faintheart. She worries about physical harm and about what people will think. She equates fear with feminity and would rather gain weight than fight fear.

— The Collector. She collects things and people indiscriminately. As her friend, you must mix with the people and rhapsodize over the things — old, new, stunning or dilapidated.

— The friendship involvement. Women need a support system of friends, but why must they always have a designated Best Friend?

— Time and money. Many women are habitually late for everything. Many can't balance their checkbooks and fail to realize the days of feminine financial idiocy are over. You can no longer giggle and say you don't know anything about money — in fact, you shouldn't giggle at all.

— Mammy dearest. Resist the temptation to mother — and smother — anybody who is not your child. That means you will never tell a grown person to take their boots because it's going to snow or explain why your way is better than theirs.

— Chatty Cathy. Some women take an hour to leave a party or get off the phone — after they have said goodbye.

— Reflected glory. Many women live vicariously. They lead a humdrum life and watch the good stuff on television. They take their self-image from their husband's career, their son's grades, their daughter's toe-dancing, and they refer to their husband's company as "we."

Produce labeling sought

By ANN BECKMANN
The Everett Herald

There may be a day when supermarket produce will be labeled so shoppers will know what specific varieties of produce they are buying. Consumer advocacy groups on the East Coast already are starting to lobby for more detailed labeling of vegetables and fruits.

A carrot is more than just a carrot. One head of red-tipped leaf lettuce is not quite the same as the next. And anybody who eats tomatoes knows "vine-ripened" does not tell all. Some varieties not only have more flavor than others but also are higher in nutrients.

In Marysville, Wash., at the Snohomish County Cooperative Extension's demonstration garden, Beth Burrows of Edmonds, Wash., is taking this business of nutritious vegetables seriously. Certain vegetable varieties, she says, have been developed for or have been discovered to have better nutritional qualities.

Take A-Plus carrots, for example, a relatively new variety that is very high in vitamin A. Or Butte potatoes, which average 58 percent more vitamin C and 20 percent more protein than other potatoes, she says. Sweet 100 cherry tomatoes might be a standard variety, but they are also notably higher in vitamin C than other tomatoes.

Italian flat-leaf parsley, says the master gardener, is higher in vitamins A and C and iron than the more familiar curly-leaf parsley. Jersey Golden acorn squash has three times the beta-carotene of green acorn squash. And although lettuce might not top anybody's list of vitamin-packed vegetables, the new Red Sails variety is considered to be unusually nutritious, Burrows says.

As she sifted her way through seed catalogs, Burrows found enough nutritious vegetable varieties to fill her gourmet section, a corner in the lush demonstration garden at Jennings Park in Marysville, about 30 miles north of Seattle. She says she also wanted to include some of those vegetables long recognized as good sources of vitamins and minerals.

Broccoli made the list for its vitamins A and C. Spinach was included for its vitamins A and C, iron and zinc. Vegetable amaranth, a spinachlike crop that grows well in warm weather, was added for its calcium and iron content. Then there is corn salad, a lettucelike vegetable with one-third more iron than spinach. Kale won a spot for being rich in vitamins A and C as well as potassium.

CARROTS WITH TARRAGON

2 bunches small carrots
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon brown sugar
2 lettuce leaves
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 teaspoon chopped tarragon
2 tablespoons heavy cream
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste

Wash carrots. Slice thin. Put in frying pan with butter and sugar. Cover with lettuce leaves, dripping with water. Cover pan and cook for 20 minutes (may be necessary to add more water). Remove lettuce, add parsley, tarragon, cream, salt and pepper. Mix and serve. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

From Jean Hersey's "Cooking with Herbs."

COLCANNON

4 medium potatoes
3 cups chopped kale
6 green onions, chopped
1-3 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
Sprig parsley
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cube potatoes and boil until tender.

Stir kale and onions in heavy pan over medium heat for 5 minutes. (The water that clings to kale from washing is sufficient moisture for cooking.)

Mash potatoes with milk and margarine. Combine with kale, onions, parsley, salt and pepper. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes at 400 degrees and serve. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Tigers near-unanimous No. 1 pick

By The Associated Press

Bishop Kelly of Boise and Richfield climbed to the top of their divisions in The Associated Press high school football poll this week.

The Knights became the third team in three weeks to occupy the No. 1 position in Class A-2 by vote of Idaho's sportswriters and broadcasters, following a 54-8 drubbing of Burley. Shelley, last week's No. 1 team, lost 10-6 to Marsh Valley of Arimo last Friday and dropped to No. 3 this week.

Richfield, ranked third in the eight-man ratings a week ago, ended defending state champion Council's 25-game winning streak with a 26-6 victory on Saturday. Last week's No. 1 eight-man team, North Gem of Bancroft, fell to Rockland 18-6 last weekend and dropped to third place in the poll.

Meridian, Homedale and Oakley retained the No. 1 spots in Classes A-1, A-3 and A-4, respectively.

In A-1, the Warriors, 2-0, received 65 of a possible 70 points and 11 of 14 first-place votes cast to finish ahead of Coeur d'Alene, 1-0, last week's No. 2 team. Highland of Pocatello, 2-0, and Boise High, 2-0, kept the third and fourth spots, but Borah of Boise, 1-1, supplanted Lewiston as the No. 5 team after the Bengals were shut out by Boise, 26-0.

In A-2, Bishop Kelly, now 1-1, got eight of the 14 first-place votes and 54 of a possible 70 points to move up from third to first. Fourth-ranked Vallivue of Caldwell, now 1-1, supplanted Jerome in the No. 2 spot, followed by Shelley, 1-1; Wallace, 2-0; and Lakeland of Rathrum, 1-1. Jerome, a 40-26 loser to Mountain Home, and fifth-ranked St. Maries, which fell 24-22 to Orofino, dropped from the ratings.

In A-3, 2-0 Homedale received 12 of the 14 first-place votes and 64 of a possible 70 points to stay on top, but third-ranked Fruitland, now 2-0, replaced Gooding as the No. 2 team after the Senators lost 37-16 to Buhl. Challis, 2-0 and ranked No. 4 last week, moved up a notch, followed by 2-0 North Fremont of Ashton, last week's fifth-rated team. Aberdeen, 2-0, made its first appearance of the season in the ratings in the No. 5 position.

Oakley kept its No. 1 ranking in Class A-4, but barely. The 2-0 Hornets, who have yet to give up a point this season, picked up seven of the 14 first-place votes and 58 of a possible 70 points to finish ahead of Mullan, also 2-0, which got three first-place votes and 56 points. Kendrick, 2-0, remained in third place, followed by Wilder, 2-0, and Raft River of Malta, also 2-0.

In the eight-man ratings, Richfield, 2-0, picked up 13 of 14 first-place votes and 69 of a possible 70 points to finish ahead of Garden Valley, 2-0, which moved up from fifth place last week. North Gem, 1-1, dropped to third, followed by Rockland, 1-1, making its first appearance of the season in the survey. Salmon River of Riggins, 1-1, fell from fourth to fifth place following a 54-44 loss to Adrian, Ore., which Council, 0-1 and ranked second last week, dropped from the ratings for the first time in three years.

Suspended 'Husker ballplayers reprieved

NCAA panel revokes their tickets instead

By DOUG TUCKER
The Associated Press

MISSION, Kan. — The NCAA on Tuesday restored full eligibility to all 60 Nebraska football players who were told last week they would be suspended at least one game for improper use of game passes.

Instead, the Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals said the guilty players will be stripped of game-pass privileges this season. Furthermore, Committee Chairman Dave Maggard of the University of California said every NCAA Division I men's football and basketball program will be asked to review their student athlete's use of pass lists from the 1985-86 academic year.

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, who had said there was a possibility the Cornhuskers might have forfeited the season opener against Florida State if the situation wasn't reviewed, was pleased with the NCAA's ruling.

"I think this is the best step they could take," Osborne said from Lincoln, Neb. "We are really pleased. I think it is a tough, but fair decision."

"I certainly would say we are extremely pleased," Nebraska faculty representative James O'Hanlon said from Lincoln. "This seems very fair for the players and everyone involved. It certainly is very satisfactory to us."

Any violations will be dealt with in the same manner as those at Nebraska, with loss of pass privileges, Maggard said.

"We found no indication of financial gains by the student-athletes," Maggard said in a statement released by the NCAA. "If we had, our decision would have been different."

The subcommittee heard Nebraska's appeal by teleconference call Tuesday morning for 90 minutes and didn't reach a decision until late in the afternoon. The suspensions were levied last week by the Eligibility Committee, the first time the controversial pass rule had been dealt with since its adoption in the Jan. 1985 convention.

O'Hanlon said Nebraska officials had offered some proposals that were more severe and involved "phasing (the penalties) by the number of violations of the athletes involved."

"We felt the original penalty was very harsh on the institution and the players in view of what had happened because what they did in falsifying relationships was unethical conduct," Osborne said.

Osborne said ethical matters are primarily handled by the institutions involved, "and this was an ethical matter, not a rule violation."

The University of Tennessee held 10 players out of its game last Saturday with New Mexico, saying that they had been guilty of violating the rule, which says only a players' relatives and fellow students can use the four passes Division I players receive for each home game.

Will Bailey of Auburn, the NCAA's secretary-treasurer and a member of the subcommittee, said we might consider a threesee at all" during the conference call.

Tennessee athletic director Doug Dickey said from Knoxville, Tenn. that school officials have a conference call set for Thursday with the NCAA on their suspensions.

"We will still have our discussion with them," Dickey said. "I'm sure it's a situation we can work out, based on the Nebraska situation. I feel sure we're in the same situation.

"We may want to consider ask-

WRHS serves notice

To A-2 rivals

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Wood River demonstrated power at the net Tuesday in a volleyball triangular previewing the season and district in the A-2 ranks.

More volleyball — D2

The Wolverines, now 6-1, thrashed Jerome 15-4 and 15-10, then blew past Buhl by scores of 15-5 and 15-4, in a preview of next month's District 4 Class A-2 tournament. The Indians outlasted the hosts in the evening's only three-game match 15-7, 17-19, 15-8.

Seniors Holly Bernhagen — 10 kills on 22 attempts with no errors — was nearly matched in statistics by teammate Amy Engelbert who registered the same number of kills in four more tries.

"Every time she set one we got a kill," said Wood River Coach Dave Neumann in praise of Sunny Blades, a Wolverine setter who chalked up 22 assists in the two games.

"Everything was kind of slow motion out there tonight," Neumann continued. "But it's always nice to play the entire district in one night and win."

Just about everyone in America's a fan of Slippery Rock

By BOB DVORCHAK
The Associated Press

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa. — Slippery Rock University, the little school with a funny name and a cult following, opens its season Saturday. And announcers at major college games across the country can't wait.

"We announce their score at all of our games. We do it religiously. They could be called America's small college team," said Bruce Madej, sports information director at Michigan.

"The name has a fascination. It turns people on. A presidential candidate in the New Hampshire primary would love to have the name recognition of Slippery Rock," said Beano Cook, a former ABC-TV college football analyst, now with ESPN.

Football at Michigan, Notre Dame, Oklahoma and other college powerhouses is comparable to a slick Hollywood production; at Slippery Rock it's more like a low-budget home movie.

The national fascination with the school, located about 45 miles north of Pittsburgh, began 50 years ago. In 1936, pollsters were divided over Minnesota and Pittsburgh as college football champions.

One writer satirically crowned Slippery Rock because it beat Westminster 14-0, which beat West Virginia Wesleyan 7-6, which beat Duquesne 2-0, which beat Pitt 7-0, which had beaten Notre Dame 26-0, which beat Northwestern 26-6, which shut out Minnesota 6-0.

Since then, the mere mention of the school's name generates chuckles at other college games.

"People just cheer Slippery Rock because they think the name sounds funny. To me, Kalamazoo is funny," said John Carpenter, Slippery Rock's sports information director for 17 years.

"This thing doesn't die. It's not a fad. It's a phenomenon," Carpenter said.

"We're not popular for the same reason as the New York Yankees or the Dallas Cowboys. It's more like why Catholics root for Notre Dame. I think a lot of people have adopted us," Carpenter said.

The school, which has 6,500 students and is one of 14 Pennsylvania-owned universities, could be Wechachochapohka University. That's the word the Seneca Indians gave to the slimy rocks they tumbled on while chasing British soldiers in 1779. The soldiers crossed they creek in hard-soled boots; the fumbled-footed Indians slid in their smooth moccasins, according to legend.

It could be a long day for Slippery Rock. The team lost to starters from a team that went 5-5 last year, Hillsdale, located in Michigan, returns 29 lettermen from a team that went 11-1-1, tying Central Arkansas 10-10 for the championship of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

But winning and losing seem to have little to do with Slippery Rock's renown.

"There's definitely a football tie-in to our popularity. But our sales are always consistent. It doesn't depend on how well our team does. Penn State can have a good year or a bad year, and business could drop off," said Stan Shedaker, manager of the school's bookstore. "With Slippery Rock, it's almost a cult following like some movies have."

The mystique has led to national exposure.

In 1964, Slippery Rock played a regular season game in the Rose Bowl against against California State College at Los Angeles. It also played in the Knute Rockne Bowl in Atlantic City, NJ., in 1972 and the national small college playoffs in 1974. ABC-TV made one its game a regional telecast in 1983.

And in 1979, Michigan invited Slippery Rock to play Pennsylvania rival Shippensburg in its stadium.

"The year before, we had announced Slippery Rock was losing in the final minute to Shippensburg. Then we announced they came back to win. The crowd went bananas," said athletic director Don Canham.

"So I figured, why not invite them here for a rematch. We drew 63,000 people."

Such notoriety has its benefits. People drive in off Interstate 79 or send in mail orders from every state plus Australia, Canada and West Germany for Slippery Rock memorabilia.

For skeptics, the school peddles a green and white pennant that says: "Yes, There Really Is A Slippery Rock."

The item goes with all manner of sweatshirts, T-shirts, hats, shorts, stocking caps, scarves, jackets, backpacks, ties, playing cards, golf balls, baby bottles, bibs, beer mugs, megaphones, Christmas tree ornaments, wine skins and license plate holders with the Slippery Rock logo.

The campus store does about $350,000, or about 21 percent of all sales, on school clothing. The percentage is about triple the national average, according to the National Association of School Stores. The school has 25,000 alumni but mails out 44,000 clothing catalogs.

"When our students go on spring break to Florida, they have people buy the shirts right off their backs for triple what the retail price is," said Louise Frampton, apparel buyer for the school's bookstore.

McMahon ridicules Bears' owner in his just-published autobiography

By DAVID DISHNEAU

> 'I sometimes think I was born to be a Bear. That doesn't mean I wasn't born to finish a Raider.'
> — Jim McMahon

CHICAGO — Jim McMahon bites the hand that signs his paycheck in his new autobiography but if Chicago Bears President Michael McCaskey is hurt, he's not saying.

"Michael McCaskey doesn't have any qualifications to operate the Bears, except his name," McMahon, the Bears quarterback, writes in McMahon!, a 223-page book coauthored by Chicago Tribune columnist Bob Verdi.

McCaskey's secretary said he could not be reached for comment, but a Bears spokesman said McCaskey would not comment on the book, which has been in stores for about 10 days.

"He's not going to be responding to McMahon's book," Ken Valdiserri said, adding he didn't know whether McCaskey had read it.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported that McCaskey said he had not read the book.

McMahon writes that he was predestined to be a Bear, but hints he would rather retire early or be traded to the Los Angeles Raiders than finish his career with the Bears under McCaskey.

"I sometimes think I was born to be a Bear. That doesn't mean I wasn't born to finish a Raider," McMahon writes.

He paints McCaskey, who became the president of the team in 1983 after the death of his grandfather, Bears founder George Halas, as a penny-pincher whose unwillingness to pay some players what they ask could spell trouble down the road for the defending Super Bowl champions.

McMahon says McCaskey is regarded as a "genius" by other

ISU's offense leads Big Sky

BOISE (AP) — A 572-yard outburst against Division II Chico State has given Idaho State the early lead in the Big Sky Conference football statistics.

But Nevada-Reno, with two straight victories, has both the individual passing and rushing leaders.

With three Big Sky teams averaging more than 40 points per game, and two averaging more than 500 yards per game, the early season statistics are loaded with high-powered offensive performances.

ISU rolled up 43 points against Chico State. That gave the Bengals the Big Sky lead in passing and rushing offense and quarterback Gino Mariani leads in total offense with 334 yards per game.

But Nevada-Reno fullback Charvez Foger leads Big Sky rushers with 198 yards in two games. And according to the NCAA quarterback rating system, Reno's Eric Beavers leads the Big Sky with a ranking of 198.2. He has completed 38 of 56 passes in two games, good for 618 yards and seven touchdowns, with just one interception.

Second-rated is Mariani, at 130.5, with 17 completions in 34 passes, good for 334 yards but two interceptions and just one TD pass.

Boise State leads in team defense, pass defense and rushing defense, but lost its opening game, 21-19 to Eastern Washington.

Nevada-Reno wide receivers Bryan Calder and Northern Arizona University cornerback DuJuan Robinson have been named the first Big Sky Conference players of the week for the 1986 football season.

Calder, a senior from San Jose, Calif., helped guide the Wolf Pack offense to a 35-7 win over Sam Houston State from Huntsville, Texas.

Twin Falls netters, now 3-0, make short work of Broncos

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A vastly improved Twin Falls Bruins volleyball team kept their record unblemished with an easy 15-2, 15-2 victory over Blackfoot in the Bruins home-opener Tuesday night in a Gem State Conference dual match.

The Gem State Conference contest lasted less than a half-hour as the Bruins boosted their conference and overall record to 3-0.

"We only made one or two mistakes," said Twin Falls Coach Jerry Sivulich. "The year's experience has really helped out."

One year ago, the Bruins were struggling with only one senior and players with little or no varsity experience while this years squad has gotten out of the blocks on a track to host the district playoffs.

Tuesday's victory was a total team effort with Sivulich unloading the bench often while utilizing all of the Bruin players.

The number of players participating in the contest reflected on the statistics.

Dana Cowen and Dana Roberts, who usually spike the ball 15 to 20 times each in a match, only had four spikes apiece against the Broncos.

Roberts, however, had an excellent evening at the serving line as did teammate Tracy Szabo. The pair combined on serves that kept Blackfoot off balance and gave the Bruins the advantage in the games.

"We played really well for this early in the year," said Sivulich.

Twin Falls, which only has three matches remaining at home, hits the road with a triangular meet with Skyline and Region III rival Pocatello on Thursday.

The Bruin junior varsity squad beat Blackfoot 15-12, 16-14.

Gooding 15-15 Valley 5-8

GOODING — The Gooding Senators tuned up for the big conference match with Kimberly Thursday night by dumping Valley 15-5, 15-8, in a Canyon Conference dual volleyball match.

Susie Robertson paced the Senators at the net with nine kills and when Robertson couldn't get to the net, Wendy Anderson and Mauren Swenson kept the Vikings guessing.

Lora Mink and Niki Hohnhorst eached had eight points while serving for Gooding.

Lisa Huettig had eight points serving for Valley while Lori Reed had some good spikes at the net for the Vikings.

The loss was the first in conference for Valley as they fell to 1-1, while Gooding is 1-0 in conference and 2-1 overall.

The Senators also won the junior varsity game 15-6, 15-4.

Shoshone 15-15 Murtaugh 7-10

SHOSHONE — Shelly Rowlan and Patti O'Maley helped the Shoshone Indians to a 15-7, 15-10 victory over Murtaugh Tuesday night in a Magic Valley Conference dual volleyball encounter.

O'Maley and Rowlan had some outstanding play from the net and at the serving line in the win.

The Indians, who improved their record to 4-3 travel to Wendell Thursday night for a non-conference clash.

Oakley 15-15 Hansen 8-9

HANSEN — The Oakley Hornets used their height to their advantage Tuesday night as they downed Hansen 15-8, 15-9 in a Magic Valley Conference dual match.

Bonnie Burch keyed the Hornets attack as she had some good net play against the home standing Huskies.

Oakley also won the junior varsity match 8-15, 15-7, 15-7.

Wendell 15-2-15 Hagerman 10-15-4

WENDELL — A Tuesday night non-conference victory over Hagerman kept the Wendell Trojans in the ranks of the volleyball unbeaten in the young season.

The hosts took a 15-10 opening game decision, then saw the second slip away 15-2 to the Pirates, who were paced by the hitting of Cindy Aja. But the Trojan girls put together a good overall team effort in capturing the rubber game, and the match, by a 15-4 count.

Wendell was victorious in the jayvee opener 9-15, 15-8, 15-10.

Shoshone comes calling on Thursday to test the 4-0 Trojans in another non-conference encounter.

Filer 15-16 Castleford 11-14

FILER — Rallying from a loss in the opener, Filer captured its first volleyball win of 1986 on Tuesday.

The Wildcats fell to Castleford 15-11, but battled past the Wolves in consecutive 16-14 hair-raisers.

The hosts were also victors in the JV preliminary match.

Filer travels to Glenns Ferry Thursday evening in the Canyon Conference opener for both.

Briefly in Sports

Crown likely to be redshirted

MOSCOW — Steve Crown, a freshman defensive tackle from Filer at the University of Idaho, will likely be redshirted this season.

Idaho Sports Information Director Dave Cook said Tuesday that Crown, a 6-foot-5, 250-pounder who was listed third on the Vandals' depth chart before the season at one of the defensive tackle positions, will be redshirted unless injuries befall one of the other defensive tackles within the next few weeks.

A redshirt season would give Crown four full years of eligibility, starting next season.

Crown, who was also recruited by Boise State, was one of Vandal Coach Keith Gilbertson's final signees last spring.

Hollingsworth wins EIRA title

TWIN FALLS — Jeff Hollingsworth of Twin Falls has been named the 1986 Eastern Idaho Rodeo Association Bull Riding champion.

Hollingsworth, 26, and other bullriders have been competing in approximately 35 rodeos this summer, concluding with the finals held in Blackfoot on Sept. 1-2. The riders competed in several bullriding events, including team roping and bareback riding.

Despite being a amateur association, the season champion is decided by total money earnings for the year. Hollingsworth won over $2,500 for the season.

E. Carolina put on probation

GREENVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The East Carolina football program was placed on one-year probation by the NCAA Tuesday for violations that occurred while Ed Emory was the school's coach, but the team will not be barred from television or bowl appearances.

The probation followed what was termed a "self-investigation" by the school.

Chancellor Dr. John Howell made the announcement Tuesday. The NCAA made a similar announcement at its Shawnee Mission, Kan., headquarters.

The penalties placed by the NCAA include a public reprimand and censure, and a one-year period of probation.

Bengals lose linebacker Rasco

POCATELLO — Idaho State University has lost one of its starting linebackers for the season with a leg injury.

Kevin Rasco, a 6-foot, 230-pound junior transfer from California's Cerritos College, was injured during the first quarter of ISU's victory over Chico State last Saturday when an opposing player ran into the back of Rasco's right leg. Rasco suffered a broken artery in the calf, and will not be able to return this season.

Rasco will be redshirted. He will be replaced as a starter at outside linebacker in the Bengals' 4-3 defense by Tony Manu, a 6-1, 225-pound freshman from Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

ing for some different penalties for those who gave up one game," Dickey said. "Reasonable minds have prevailed."

The NCAA announcement said one pass would be revoked during the 1986-87 academic year for each violation. The Division I programs will be asked to report the results of their internal audits of their 1985-86 pass lists to their respective conferences, which in turn will forward the information to the NCAA.

Independents will report directly to the NCAA.

This will involve, counting women's basketball, more than 500 programs.

Some other alleged violations against members of the Nebraska football program were not considered by the committee.

Only four members of the five-person committee took part in the hearing after Mary Jean Mulvaney of the University of Chicago excused herself because she is a Nebraska graduate.

The other committee members are Maggard; Bailey; Kathleen Wear, director of women's programs at La Salle; and Ray Burse, president of Kentucky State University.

The pass-list rule was drawn up and sponsored by the Southwest Conference and is the latest of several attempts to curb the practice of players selling game tickets at inflated prices. It could be amended at next January's NCAA convention.

"This decision places the bulk of the responsibility on the student-athlete," Maggard said. "Our task as athletic administrators is to promote competition and at the same time hold student-athletes accountable for their actions. We feel this decision accomplishes this."

Osborne said the decision affects his players more than most schools because Nebraska has sold out its last 144 home football games.

Elsewhere in college football Tuesday, Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth apologized for statements he made following the top-ranked Sooners' 38-3 victory over UCLA last weekend.

"I used poor judgment in making uncomplimentary remarks about UCLA, but I also understand that, due to the fact that the reader almost never gets the whole story, I can be misunderstood," Bosworth said in a statement he wrote, which was released by the school's sports information office.

team owners for winning the Super Bowl without contract holdouts Todd Bell and Al Harris.

But "the precedent McCaskey established can mean only trouble," McMahon writes.

"You can continue to think that 'we'll win with what we have' only so long. Pretty soon, you're back to being an ordinary team."

McMahon, who proudly wears his bad-boy reputation along with a punkish haircut and ever-present sunglasses, writes glowingly of Raiders owner Al Davis.

Davis "lets his players be themselves as long as they play like hell on Sundays," McMahon writes. "Davis doesn't want robots. He wants football players."

McMahon says other players share his feelings about McCaskey: "Most of us just laugh to keep from strangling him."

McMahon was unavailable for comment, but his agent, Chicago lawyer Stephen Zucker, said the quarterback simply wrote what he felt.

"He loves being a Bear, though, and that's one thing that does come out if you take the whole thing in context," Zucker said.

McMahon received a six-figure advance from Warner Books Inc., Zucker said, adding it was the largest ever given an athlete-author. He would not specify the sum.

Warner Books spokeswoman Ellen Herrick said she could not discuss advances but she said the book had been selling briskly, especially in Chicago.

"We're pleasantly surprised at how well it's doing in Chicago," Herrick said. "They apparently can't keep it on the shelves."

Never seriously pressed in game one, Buhl had its hands full in in the second game of the finale.

The Indian faithful began to file toward the doors after their team broke away from the fifth tie of the contest on service points by Amy Butler and Angela Slagel to lead 14-11.

But after Janet Brandt added one Jerome before the visitors misfired, Tonya Vogel handed Jerome its first lead at 15-14. Gayla Smutny shoved Buhl back to a tie and Butler built the lead back to one before Laura Cecil closed the game on a trio of points on the next service.

The Tigers worked ties at four and six points to start the deciding game, but were able to score just twice more before Nancy Stevens iced the game with back-to-back blocks.

"I was pleased with our net play against Jerome in the final game." said first-year mentor Ed Richards of the 4-2 Indians. "Especially so with the play of Nancy Stevens and, at times, Shelly Sorenson. Gayla Smutney did a good job — she was all over the court."

Jerome falls to 1-6 in the early season, but there's light at the end of the tunnel according to Tiger Coach Susan Jones.

"What's frustrating for me is the serving," she said. "We're starting to work as a team. We have seven seniors back, but only one is a returning starter. They haven't played together and we're still working on mental attitude. I think it will all come together."

NL: Astros roll past Reds, take 10-game lead in West

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros aren't ready to start talking about clinching the National League Western Division title, even after Tuesday's 9-2 blowout of the Cincinnati Reds, their nearest rival.

"Once we clinch the title and no one can catch us, then we can talk big about being the champions," Hatcher said. "Right now, we've got Los Angeles to think about."

Hatcher did his part Tuesday to push the Reds 10 games behind the Astros.

Hatcher got three straight singles, scored three runs, stole two bases and drove in one run over a three-inning breakaway.

"These were big losses for them," Hatcher said. "They are 10 games out now and the way we are playing, it's going to be tough for them to come back."

Houston starter Mike Scott and Tom Browning were involved in a pitching duel over the first 5½ innings until the Astros broke it open in the sixth with four runs, highlighted by Glenn Davis' two-run double.

The Reds had hoped to tighten the race by sweeping the Astros and pulling within six games of the leaders.

"I'm not going to quit," Reds Manager Pete Rose said. "We're still in second but I can't worry about catching Houston. I'm worried about catching San Diego the way we're playing."

Astros right fielder Kevin Bass helped continue the assault on the Reds with a two-run double in the eighth inning. He felt the blowout coming on.

Scott pitched a five-hitter over eight innings and Davis' double keyed a four-run sixth inning as the Astros swept the two-game series with the Reds. The teams meet for the final time this season in a three-game series starting next Tuesday in Cincinnati.

Scott, 16-9, who leads the major league in strikeouts, fanned seven to increase his total to 260, the third highest mark in Astros' history. J.R. Richard struck out 313 and 303 in 1979 and 1978, respectively.

NEW YORK (AP) — Andre Dawson's two-run homer with none out in the ninth inning gave the Montreal Expos a 9-7 triumph over the New York Mets Tuesday night.

Tim Raines opened the inning with a single off relief pitcher Jesse Orosco, 6-6, and Dawson followed with his homer to left on the first pitch. Randy Hunt followed with an RBI single to give the Expos a two-run lead.

The NL East-leading Mets, who are now 7-7 against the Expos, had taken a 7-6 lead in the bottom of the eighth on Darryl Strawberry's 21st homer of the season.

Tim Burke, 9-7, was the winner in relief. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his 31st save.

The Expos had tied the game at 6-6 in the eighth inning on pinch-hit RBI singles by Wally Johnson and Jim Wohlford.

Wayne Krenchicki, the Montreal third baseman, had three singles in four at-bats as the Expos outhit the Mets 19-10.

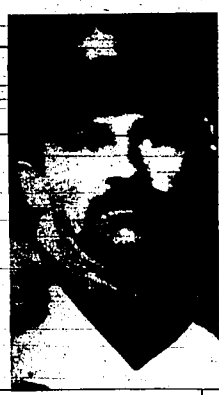

Andres Galarraga hit a two-run homer, his ninth of the season in the fourth inning when the Expos scored three times to take a 4-3 lead. Montreal's Dann Bilardello also homered in the fourth, for his third of the year.

CHICAGO (AP) — Leon Durham's two-run homer in the 10th inning Tuesday gave the Chicago Cubs an 8-6 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Keith Moreland, who earlier had hit two home runs, singled with one out in the 10th before Durham hit his 18th home run of the year.

Lee Smith, 9-9, was the winner and Steve Bedrosian, 8-5, was the loser.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Andy Van Slyke had three hits and one RBI and Clint Hurdle hit a solo homer to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Tuesday night.

Van Slyke singled home Vince Coleman in the third inning after Coleman had singled and stole his 92nd base.

Hurdle led off the fourth with his third home run of the year and second against Rick Reuschel, 8-16.

AL: Angels up by 8½ games in West

CLEVELAND (AP) — Right-hander Kirk McCaskill pitched a six-hitter Tuesday night for his 10th complete game, and the California Angels defeated the Cleveland Indians 8-1 for their 12th victory in 14 games.

The victory, combined with Texas' 3-1 loss to Seattle, gave the Angels a season-high 8½-game lead in the American League West.

McCaskill, 16-7, struck out seven and walked two. He lost his bid for a shutout in the sixth inning on Julio Franco's sacrifice fly. McCaskill also has a one-hitter, two two-hitters and a four-hitter this season.

Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti, who was victimized by his own wildness and the Indians' poor defense, fell to 13-11, allowing seven runs, five of them earned, on six hits in six-plus innings. The knuckleballer walked seven, including five in the first two innings.

The Angels scored twice in the first without getting a hit. Gary Pettis and Brian Downing walked and advanced on Reggie Jackson's groundout before Pettis scored on a passed ball by Chris Bando. Downing came in from third when Cleveland second baseman Tony Bernazard mishandled a two-out grounder by Rupert Jones.

Seattle 3
Texas 1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Right-hander Edwin Nunez, making his first start since 1983, allowed three hits in five scoreless innings, and Jim Presley hit a two-run homer as the Seattle Mariners beat the Texas Rangers 3-1 Tuesday night.

Nunez, 1-1, had appeared in six games prior to Tuesday night, all in relief, and had pitched a total of only seven innings.

The loser was Jose Guzman, 9-13, who left in the eighth inning when Seattle scored it's third run on an RBI single by Alvin Davis.

The Rangers run came on Larry Parrish's 24th home run, off reliever Mike Trujillo in the seventh.

Guzman retired the first two batters in the Seattle first, then hit Davis with a pitch. Presley then hit a 3-2 pitch into the bleachers in left for his 25th home run.

After Scott Fletcher singled with one out in the Rangers first, Nunez retired 13 of the next 14 batters before Darrell Porter singled with two out in the fifth.

Steve Buechele followed with an infield single, but Nunez got out of the jam by retiring Toby Harrah on a fly to center.

Trujillo took over for Nunez at the start of the sixth and earned his first save.

After Presley's home run, his fifth against Texas this season, Guzman held Seattle scoreless despite giving up leadoff singles to Danny Tartabull in the second, Mickey Brantley in the third, Phil Bradley in the sixth and a leadoff walk to Tartabull in the seventh.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dwight Evans homered twice, and Marty Barrett's two-run double capped a three-run Boston rally in the seventh inning as the Red Sox defeated the Baltimore Orioles 7-5 Tuesday night, extending their winning streak to 10.

Playing their first game after Manager Earl Weaver's announced retirement at the end of the season became official, the Orioles lost for the 14th time in 17 games.

Evans began the Boston seventh with a homer, a drive that finished rookie starter John Habyan. Rich Gedman drew a one-out walk off Rich Bordi, 5-3, and moved to second on a fielding error by third baseman Floyd Rayford.

Wade Boggs fanned for the first time in 59 at-bats, but Barrett's double into the left field corner put the Red Sox ahead.

Evans hit his 22nd homer of the season with two out in the eighth for an insurance run, and Orioles pinch-hitter Juan Beniquez hit an RBI single in the bottom of the inning off Bob Stanley. Bill Buckner restored Boston's two-run cushion in the ninth with a two-out RBI single.

New York 3
Toronto 1

TORONTO (AP) — Mike Easler hit an RBI single in the eighth inning to break a 1-1 tie and propel the New York Yankees to a 3-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Tuesday night.

Don Mattingly started the eighth against reliever Mark Eichhorn, 12-5, with a single, his third hit of the game, and moved to third on a walk and a fielder's choice. Easler's one-out liner to right-center scored Mattingly and made a winner of Ron Guidry, 7-10.

United States men's tennis keeps deteriorating

By BARRY WILNER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Seven Americans made it to the final 16 of the U.S. Open this year. None of them named McEnroe or Connors.

In fact, few of the names are recognizable to even avid tennis fans. And No. 15 Brad Gilbert, the only seeded American in the fourth round, isn't exactly a marquee name.

There's even a feud brewing between John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors and the USTA in what has been a distressing year for this nation's top players, a year in which the popularity of the sport in this country is being tested.

What's happening to American tennis? And, is it a major problem for the sport?

Connors is the only American male ranked in the top 10. Seeded sixth for the Open, he was eliminated a week ago Sunday by Todd Witsken of Carmel, Ind., the 84th-ranked player in the world, in the third round.

Connors has managed to stay in sight of the top despite a 10-week suspension earlier this year after he quit during a match with Ivan Lendl. But he hasn't won a tournament in almost two years.

McEnroe, a first-round loser to Paul Annacone in the Open, spent more than half the year on the sidelines during a sabbatical. He came back for four tournaments, not winning any and making just one final. Now, he is pondering whether to continue on the circuit after dropping out of the top 20.

In addition, Davis Cup non-playing captain Tom Gorman is feuding with USTA president Randall Gregson about who can and can't represent this nation in the event.

American men's tennis appears to be in a mess. That disturbs several highly ranked players, not just Connors and McEnroe and not just Americans.

"It's essential for the game to have an American right up there," Lendl, the No. 1 men's player in the world from Czechoslovakia, said. "It's like golf, the sport is played outside of America but not on the same level in terms of competition, sponsorship, number of tournaments.

"If some young guy from the U.S. is number three or four, it would be great."

Second-ranked Mats Wilander of Sweden agreed.

"Tennis is run by Americans, mostly," he said. "The Pro Council is mostly Americans and a lot of sponsors are American. And they have so many Grand Prix tournaments in the U.S.

"You can say that France is a very big tennis nation, but there are only three or four Grand Prix tournaments. In the States, there are at least 20.

"I think it really is important that America gets some good players soon. Otherwise, it's going to kill the interest in tennis on the American side.

"That would be very bad because the Americans are very good supporters. They can live on McEnroe and Connors, but I think soon they're going to have to get someone else."

Perhaps sooner than they think.

McEnroe was not a force in the Open for the first time since 1978. He isn't certain when — or if — he'll play on tour again this year. And though he has expressed interest in helping the United States in Davis Cup play, Gregson doesn't want him on the team because of McEnroe's past behavior problems.

"I think it's kind of cutting off your nose to spite your face," the 33-year-old, five-time Open champion said. "If the idea is to go in and have the best players play and win the Davis Cup ... the USTA is not right on all hands either.

"Let's look at it as square as it should be. The way they handled a lot of situations concerning McEnroe and myself over the last year or two has been a little bit ridiculous. My concern for playing Davis Cup is maybe not as high on the priority list as McEnroe's, but would I be in the same position as McEnroe if I wanted to play? Would I be suspended also? Where do you draw the line as far as telling me where I can play tennis and where I can't ...

"If it's going to be like that not only with the USTA and the Davis Cup but also with the tournaments and the exhibitions and special events, pretty soon there's going to be no tennis. The guys are going to look up at this guy and say, 'You have something to say about it? I'm out of here.' They're going to say, 'I don't want to do anything if you're around.'"

Connors seemed to be taking aim at Gregson, though he never mentioned the USTA president by name. Gregson preferred not to comment on Connors' criticism. "Maybe it's fortunate that guys come and there's only a two-year term," Connors said. "At least you know that after two years, things are going to lighten up a little bit and you're not going to have this guy trying to have a shrine built to himself in a two-year period.

"Instead of trying to do what's best for the USTA and do what's best for U.S. junior tennis and do what's best for the guys who play Davis Cup, everybody's worried about their monument ... If they want a monument, build them a monument out here and say, 'Here lies so-and-so, who was two years in the USTA.'

"But also put down what he did for U.S. tennis. There wouldn't be many words, would there?"

Police ready to arrest 26 allegedly involved in Brussels riot

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Warrants were signed Tuesday for the arrest of 26 Liverpool soccer fans allegedly involved in last year's Heysel Stadium riot, in which 39 people were killed, Merseyside police said.

A spokesman said the fans are due to appear before a court in London on Monday when extradition proceedings will begin. Belgian prosecuting authorities have said they will be pressing for a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

The 39 people who died were caught in a stampede when English and Italian fans clashed at the European Champions' Cup final between Liverpool and Juventus at Brussels' Heysel Stadium, May 29 last year.

The riot was blamed mainly on the Liverpool fans, and English teams have been banned indefinitely from playing in any of the three European club competitions.

Detective Superintendent Bill Serjeant, head of Merseyside Police Serious Crimes Squad, issued a statement saying that the warrants were signed Monday at Bow Street Magistrates Court in London.

The statement said officers of Merseyside police and other forces in the country would carry out the arrests as soon as possible.

THE ACES©

BOBBY WOLFF

"I wish to say what I think and feel today, with the proviso that tomorrow perhaps I shall contradict it all." — Emerson

Study today's North-South cards and make your plan after winning the first spade in dummy. Be careful — the best plan goes counter to the one that will appeal to most players.

Dummy's spade jack holds the first trick, and it's obvious that the future lies with diamonds. How should South play that suit?

If South leads a club to his ace and passes his diamond jack for a losing finesse, the game goes down. East returns a spade to establish West's suit while West still has the ace of diamonds — down two.

The best chance to make the game is to lead a low diamond from dummy at trick two. This play makes the game when West has the diamond queen — also very often when East has the diamond queen (who is the East who will rise with his queen, holding Q-x or Q-x-x?).

After East plays a low diamond, South's jack goes to West's ace, but West cannot gainfully lead spades. South wins West's shift and loses another diamond to East, but it matters little. South still has time to post an overtrick.
